SUNRISE TO SUNSET

As the sun rises to start a new day, man wakes from his sleep to begin again with new hope and anticipation of the day ahead. It is a day full of work and play, laughter and tears, responsibilities and privileges. It is a busy day aimed at achieving goals, reaching new heights of excellence, and communicating with the world. As the sun sets, man changes gears and continues to prepare for the next day or works long into the night to complete any unfinished business. At night he returns to his bed weary and satisfied knowing that tomorrow will be a new beginning, with new challenges for him to face.

Life is full of many sunrises and sunsets which often go unnoticed. The four years we spend in high school start when we awake to greet the sunrise that first day of freshman year. The world of high school is busy, strenuous, hectic, and satisfying. And then the day comes to an end on that warm June afternoon when the sun sets on the graduates as they receive their diplomas on the field.

It is the aim of this book to recapture some of the memorable events that occur in the world of Bay Shore High School. As we move from dawn to dusk, we hold onto those friendships and special times because we know that when the sun sets on our high school careers we will have to greet new tomorrows in a new world.

A time capsule that needs only to be opened, the

'96 Marauder yearbook welcomes its readers with open arms. It welcomes you into our world from sunrise to sunset.

THE WORLD OF WORK

As the final bell rings, the halls quickly empty as students vacate the building to participate in after-school activities or rush off to after-school jobs. For many students the world of work is a reality and a necessity. As the sun sets each evening, large numbers of students can be seen behind the counters of various stores or waiting on customers in fast food restaurants.

Jobs give working students a sense of freedom and responsibility, knowing that the more they work the more they'll be able to afford. With college tuitions rising and car expenses escalating, many students work to earn the money they need to subsidize these costs and enjoy other activities.

Working is a way to gain self-confidence and experience. To the workhorses of Bay Shore High School, it doesn't make any difference if they are flipping burgers at McDonald's or selling shoes at Fayva. The job world gives students the opportunity to gain knowledge as well as the money to satisfy their own wants and needs.

OUR WORLD OF FASHION

Fashion styles were out of this world in 1995! Individual tastes and styles were apparent in the wide diversity of clothing worn by students in classes and at social events. The clothing certainly fit the personalities of the individuals wearing them.

Fashions ranged from the "school girl" look of plaid skirts and solid colored sweaters to corduroy pants, T-shirts, and Kool-aid colored hair. Everyone felt comfortable in something different. For some it was a pair of baggy Boss jeans, and for others it was a sunflower T-shirt with a washed out pair of jeans. No matter what fashion was chosen a baseball hat worn front or back was always a versatile accessory. Fashion was not limited to sight but sound as well as the sound of squeaking sneakers and the clanking of heeled boots were frequently heard during the school hours.

Although there was such a wide variety of fashion, there was always one thing everyone at Bay Shore thought was in fashion- dedication, responsibility, and spirit.

THE WORLD OF LEARNING

The exciting world of learning is filled with challenges, information, meetings, deadlines, and whole new worlds waiting to be explored and conquered. At every turn in the halls, students can be seen racing between bells to get books, greet friends, or grab a bite to eat.

During classes students participate in a variety of activities, including: projects, debates, discussions, and dramatizations.

In Criminal Justice, Mr. R. Richardson's traditional classroom is transformed into a courtroom where the students play the roles of lawyers, jury members, and defendants. In minutes the whole legal process unfolds before the students' eyes.

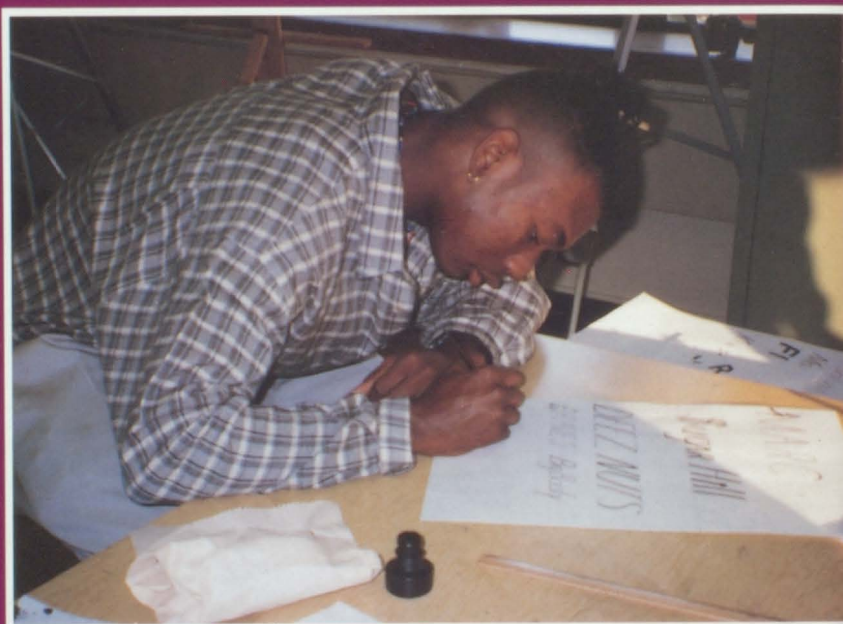

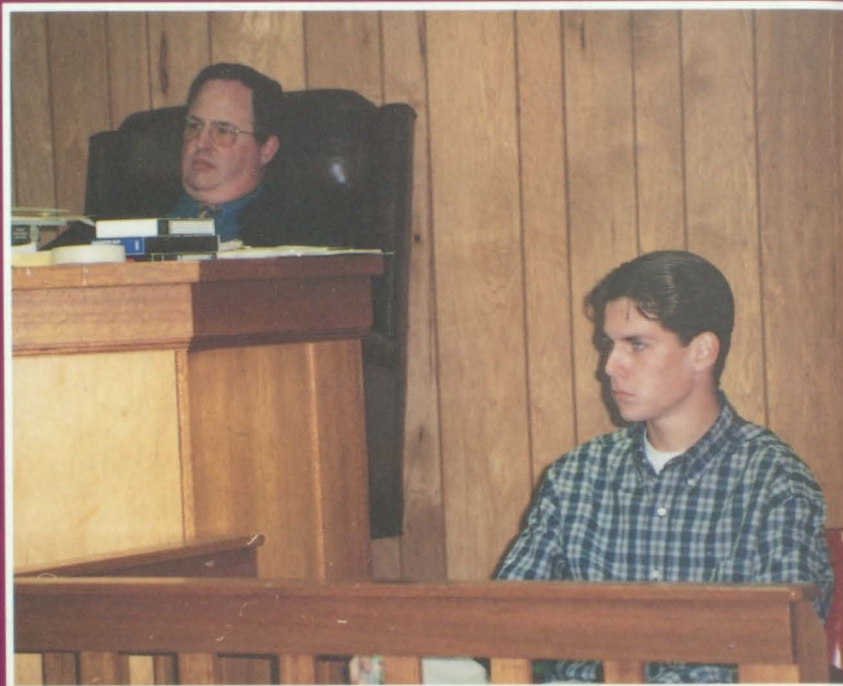

In Auto Mechanic class, students learn skills to maintain and repair cars, which may lead to a future career after graduation.

In Mr. J. D'Antoni's Dramatic Experience course students develop skills to become better and more effective speakers so that someday they may become members of the popular communications industry.

The world of learning prepares us all to assume responsible roles in society and is filled with memories that will last us for the rest of our lives.

MUSIC IN OUR WORLD

As the sun rises on each new day, students reach for the snooze button on their clock radios as they awaken to the beat of their favorite music. An integral part of each and every day of their lives, music follows students every step of the way.

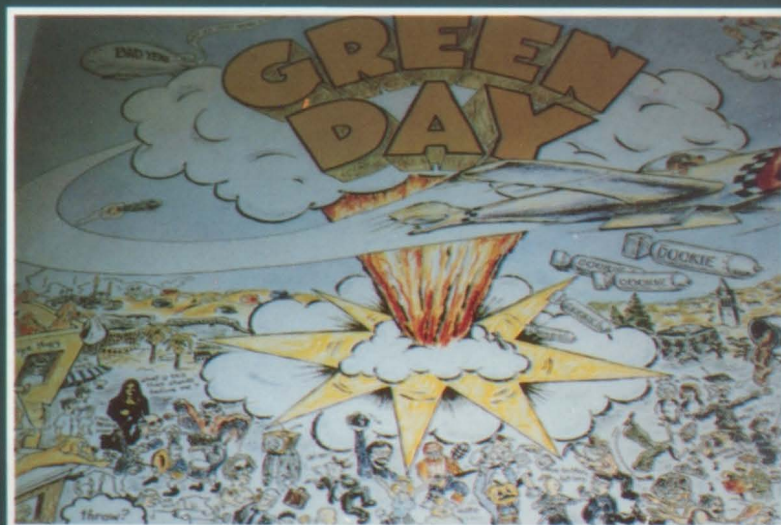

In the morning they stretch and dress to the beat of Blues Travelers and Green Day. Then they wait for the bus with REM and Jodeci blasting in their ears. As they enter the building and put away their walkmen and disc players, the last notes of Hootie and The Blowfish echo in their heads. For many this is the last music they will hear until the lunch period bell rings when the sounds of the marching band or the orchestra's rehearsing flow through the halls. During lunch many students return to their cars and enjoy the beat created by the Beastie Boys and other groups. Later in the day, Tito Rojas carries some students through the tedious chore of doing homework, while others turn to TLC to break up the monotony. And as the day draws to a close and the sun sinks into the horizon, students set their radios for the next morning and carefully place their Pearl Jam cds into their cases, secure in the fact that music will remain a constant part of their teenage world.

HOMECOMING '95

As the sun set behind the gym the homecoming fire ignited spirits as the cheerleaders led students and faculty through the Bay Shore spirit cheers. That was the last time the students saw the sun that weekend as the marchers and the football players spent the next day in the sporadic downpour.

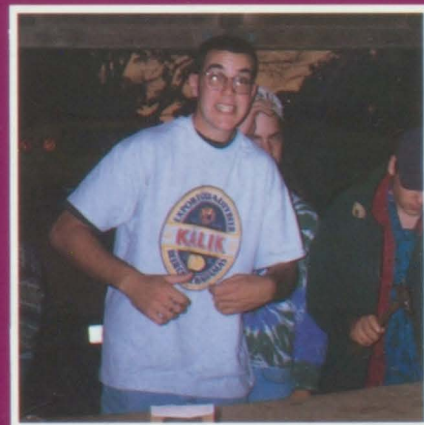

Bay Shore's Homecoming is one of the major events in our world as students from every grade level unite to participate in the annual traditon. This tradition, filled with excitement and spirit, is just one of the events at Bay Shore High, in which everybody was as one to show their support for the school. Although the rain may have dampened the streets of Bay Shore, it did not dampen the spirits of everybody participating.

The Senior Class rode along on their float which they had worked so hard to make. When their final destination was reached, all the students settled in the stands to enjoy the game.

During the half time, Homecoming King Paul Johnson was driven onto the field to a cheering crowd. Unfortunately, Bay Shore was defeated by Bellport, but the mud that covered the players reflected just how hard they had worked throughout the game.

As the sun set and the stands were cleared, everybody headed home to continue their fun as students gathered at various houses to have their own celebrations.

SPIRIT IN OUR WORLD

The world of high school is filled with many different emotions as we journey from adolescence to adulthood. One of those emotions is shown by the spirit we show for our school and the activities in which we participate. Whether it is cheering at a football or basketball game, rooting our friends on in the battle of the classes, or participating in the annual Spirit Week, Bay Shore's students are full of pride and await every opportunity to show it.

Spirit Week got rolling with Pajama Day when students and staff showed up modeling the latest in sleepwear. Everything from floppy slippers, robes, nightgowns, and teddy bears was seen parading through the halls. Everyone agreed that they felt very comfortable dressed this way.

Hippie Day saw the greatest outpouring of spirit of the entire week. Flower children were seen wandering the halls dressed in bellbottoms, tie-dyed shirts, sun glasses and sandals. The teachers seemed to have a great time that day as many had a chance to relive some of their own childhood experiences.

Hat Day and the remaining days of Spirit Week were equally as much fun. Spirit Week brought out the best in everyone and proved how special our high school days are.

The world of academics occupied the largest part of a student's life. It is, after all, the primary reason why the building continues to function year after year.

The professional teaching staff, counselors, custodians, administrators, paraprofessionals, and secretaries all were dedicated to the academic success and achievement of the student population. Success in the world of academics would guarantee success in future worlds that students would later find themselves. Everyone worked together to make the building run smoothly and efficiently. Everyone joined in the spirit of the classroom and extracurricular activities to show their support and make the learning process fun, stimulating, and academically challenging.

Renaissance programs, breakfast for champions, academic olympics, and creative teaching techniques all aimed to keep the students enthusiastic and motivated.

Those who took their work seriously and made the most of this world of academics will be left with a lasting impression and memory of their high school years.

Sophomores Are Smartest!

It was a real battle of brains as representatives from each grade level competed against one another in the annual Academic Olympics. With questions from a variety of different subject areas, students matched their wits to determine the "smartest grade level in the building". The sophomores first defeated the freshman class and then went on to beat the juniors in the final round of the playoffs.

With junior class advisor, Mr. A. Sullivan, acting as Alex Trebek, the contestants had to answer the questions in the allotted time. In science the students had to know that the name of the process by which a solid turns directly into a gas is sublimation. In literature the contestants had to know that the line, "Life for me ain't been no crystal stair," was from a poem by Langston Hughes entitled "Mother to Son."

It was a fun night for all who attended, especially the seniors who outnumbered all of the other classes put together. Even though the seniors only came in third, they, along with everyone else enjoyed the evening.

Retirees decide to . . .

Expand Their Horizons

After thirty-five years of teaching mathematics Mr. W. Goebel retired from the Bay Shore high school. Mr. Goebel has seen it all as Bay Shore made a big change. He feels that there is terrific potential in the school. Exciting things are going to happen; the education for the students is going to get better, but it is too bad that he will not be here. He has high hopes for Bay Shore High. Looking back over his career, he especially cherishes the memories of his first ten years. After retirement Mr. Goebel plans to travel, read, and relax during his spare time. He leaves this message to all his colleagues and students: "Be positive and be open to change."

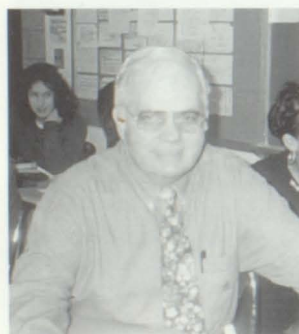

As the end of the school year approached, several members of the professional staff looked to broaden their horizons beyond the world of Bay Shore High School and decide to take their retirement.

Mr. A. Smith, school psychologist, has worked in the district for 27 years. During his professional career, he has most enjoyed working with the individual students, getting to know them, and then counseling them towards making good decisions. He has also enjoyed working with the staff who were great people.

He looks forward to retiring somewhat apprehensively but with a sense of accomplishment. He hopes to take advantage of his free time to expand his knowledge of psychology and possibly work in a clinic or at a local university.

Over 23 years of teaching, Mrs. A. Rivera has decided to settle down and retire. She has enjoyed the challenge of teaching non-English speaking students and will miss the close association with her students. As the first ESL teacher in the district, she used to visit every school. She particularly enjoyed the enthusiasm of the little children. She is happy to end her career watching her students graduate and go on to college to open their minds. For Mrs. R. teaching has been a passion, and she is sad to leave behind the students who are still underclassmen. Although she feels she had to be tough at times, she hoped that she will be remembered for encouraging her students to work up to potential.

In her retirement she plans to devote her time to travel, community work, and being a good grandmother. She is also hoping on creating a scholarship fund for Hispanic students go on with their education.

After thirty-eight years as an English teacher Mr. Frank Fontinell has decided to retire to devote his time to writing and conducting religious retreats and conferences. Becoming a teacher was a decision Mr. Fontinell made while still a high school student, and it is one decision that he has never regretted. It has been one of the best ways to spend his life, and he would certainly do it over again if given a chance. According to Mr. Fontinell, "People should be the best person they can be, and their lives will be successful as a result." Reflecting on his professional career, Mr. Fontinell feels that his life has been a composite of many different memories of the people he has known and the people who have helped him grow.

Retirees

bid farewell to Bay Shore!

Among those closing their classroom doors for the last time is Mr. M. Friedman. After teaching at Bay Shore High School for thirty-three years, Mr. M. Friedman has decided to give up his chalk and grade book and trade them in for medical textbooks and term papers. He has applied to physician school to pursue his dream, working in the medical profession. "You can't stay where you are; you have to move on," said Mr. Friedman with a steady voice.

Looking back on his years here, he recalls the many changes he has witnessed since his arrival in 1963. The changes he has seen have been many. He recalls when the new wing was still in construction and students came to school in shirts and ties and dresses. He noted that he has seen the increase in the minority population and the rise in the one — parent household. What he sees now is the influx of young teachers pumping life into subjects and the school as a whole.

"I leave Bay Shore older, not just chronologically but intellectually. Before I would never have had the confidence to pursue medicine."

Glancing around his room, he smiled and recalled how much it had become. There is no doubt that, like a person leaving home for the first time, he will miss Bay Shore High and his life as a teacher.

Art teacher, Mrs. Carol Jones, who has been with the district for 30 years, has also decided to retire this year. Of her many years in the classroom she has enjoyed working with the students, seeing them succeed, and seeing them take pride in their accomplishments. She has also enjoyed when alumni in the art field have come back to share their success stories with her.

During her professional career as a teacher, she has done much more than just teach art. Since 1978 she has worked with Mr. J. D'Antoni starting first as an artistic advisor for the Junior High shows and ending up as set designer and backstage advisor in the High School. In addition to her theatrical pursuits, for the past eight years she has spent countless hours working on the MARAUDER yearbook and has enjoyed the response she has received from the students and staff when they have seen the yearbook each June.

For Mrs. Jones, Bay Shore has been a great place to spend 30 years. She has enjoyed what she's accomplished and feels that it was well worth all her effort. "I just love art," she said. "Being creative, drawing, painting, and sharing my knowledge and skills with others has brought me great joy and pleasure." As her teaching career comes to an end, she plans to travel, spend winters in a warm climate, garden, and catch up on some drawing and painting of her own.

After a long career as a guidance counselor, classroom teacher, and basketball and softball coach, Mr. Frank Pittelli has decided to settle down and take a rest. During his twenty-five years working at Bay Shore, his life has revolved around kids of all sizes, shapes, colors, abilities, and interests.

According to Mr. Pittelli, the one year that stands out clearly in his mind was the class of 1976. Mr. Pittelli said, "That was the first class I ever counseled."

Mr. Pittelli also said, "I have seen Bay Shore change dramatically; the kids work harder to deal with issues that are not always easy to deal with. These changes will take a great deal of strength from both the faculty and the students going into the year 2000."

After retirement Mr. Pittelli plans to work at Jones Beach and also to pursue working with college admissions. In his leisure time he plans to paint, travel, and spend time with his wife. Mr. Pittelli says, "I am leaving Bay Shore on a positive note and my message for students is: Go for it!"

Move over Snoopy, here comes. . .

A REAL FLYING ACE!

While students spend the full day in academic classes back at the High School, a handful of others travel to the BOCES Center in Brookhaven to train in a variety of vocational programs. One of the programs that has received a great deal of attention lately is the The Suffolk Aviation Academy. This Academy taught the students aviation related programs, but also more important things that will be useful in the real world. They learned how to work diligently in a team. They also learned to be responsible and always try their best, even in the most adverse situations.

The most challenging thing they did was to teach the fellow younger students, that just started the program this year. They taught them weather theory, dead-reckoning, VOR's, physiology and navigation. This while they worked on getting their own private pilot's license.

"As I looked down in to the runway, my hands shook and my heartbeat got faster and faster, I did not believe it, I was flying a Cessna 152 by myself. This was the dream of all the students who got into The Suffolk Aviation Academy (B.O.C.E.S) two years ago" Fred Murphy said. These programs were the most complete and challenging the school district had to offer. The B.O.C.E.S programs gave to the students an edge to succeed in life.

Technological advancements on the Internet and Cyberspace took the communication world by storm and placed information on education and entertainment at the fingertips of the world.

Children of all ages around the world welcomed the opening of the latest Disney movie, "Pocahontas," another in a long-line of animated classics.

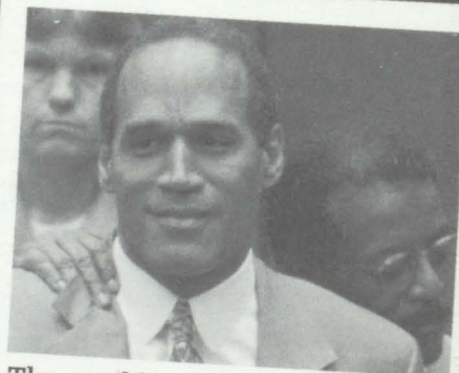

Black and white fans around the world enjoyed Rapper Coolio's smash hit, "Gangsta's Paradise," that appeared on the "Dangerous Minds" soundtrack.

The world stood still on a Sunday in January when the Dallas Cowboys with star running back Emmitt Smith beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 27-17 in Super Bowl XXX.

The sports world welcomed the return of Michael Jordan after a brief retirement from basketball. In the first game with the Chicago Bulls he scored an amazing 60 points.

The world watched and listened intently as the jury announced its verdict which proclaimed the innocence of accused murderer O. J. Simpson in the trial of the decade.

Fox TV's "Party of Five" won the hearts of viewing audiences all around the world and received a Golden Globe Award as the best TV series in 1996.

All Christians around the world listened in awe to the wisdom and spiritual guidance of Pope John Paul as he spoke at a mass in Central Park.

The world was covered in whiteness as the blizzard of '96 wreaked its havoc on Long Islanders who were left the massive job of digging their way out.

Expressions of sympathy came from all parts of the world for the man of steel, Christopher Reeves, as he battled to recover from a serious horseback riding accident.

In a flurry of excitement the world greeted the latest Beatles release "Free as a Bird" with tributes to John Lennon and the famed British singing group.

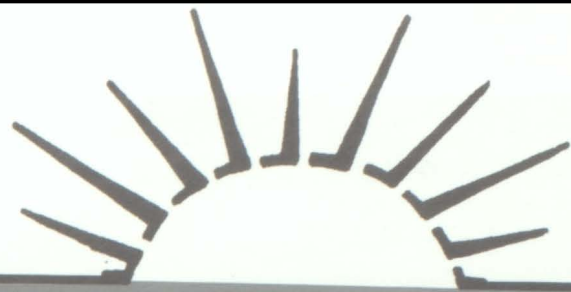

For Russell Busch and Andrea Montalvo, music was an important part of their school life.
(right inset) Jennifer O'Connell was busy at work on the poster she designed for the fall drama presentation.

The world of academics was made more enjoyable when students had something to look forward to at the end of the day. Extracurricular activities and sports filled many afternoons and evenings with the challenge of competition and the joy of companionship. Students, looking back on their high school years, recognized that it was the clubs and athletics that they remembered most. Long after the sun set each afternoon, the sounds of students' voices could be heard, rehearsing for a musical, working on a mock trial case, or jogging through the halls.

Students kept their days and evenings filled, and they enjoyed the spirit and camaraderie they shared with one another and their teachers and coaches. They will always remember the lessons they learned, the friendships they made, and the feats they accomplished. The world of student activities extended long into the night, creating memories that will be cherished as the senior graduate and enter into a new world.

SCHOOL LIFE

EMPOWERING YOUTH

(below) Kristi Corbett made sure to hang the Juniors' stocking with special care.

What do a Thanksgiving food drive, student elections, and Homecoming have in common? According to student council director, Mrs. C. DiPane, they are all activities that encourage youth to get involved and make a difference. Empowered with this goal, student council initiated and organized many different activities for students in all grade levels.

During the holiday season the members of student council organized an "Adopt-a-Family" program. They encouraged classes, teams, and clubs in the school to help provide presents and holiday cheer to needy families.

Throughout the school year student council undertook the project of re-landscaping the school courtyard. Their plans included transforming the courtyard into a place where students could congregate during good weather. Different groups and organizations were encouraged to adopt portions of the courtyard and buy into the program.

Above all, the student council's agenda was to keep students involved in their school and community.

THE CORPORATE WORLD

Faith Zimmardi and Evelyn Dahab helped advertise the projects and programs sponsored by the F.B.L.A. organization.

Did you checked out one of the colorful displays on the bulletin board in the front lobby? One of her assignments during Mrs. E. Ringer's first year here was to coordinate the F.B.L.A. Club. Mrs. Ringer and her students set goals to develop competent and aggressive business leadership skills and acumen. Students also worked on developing their confidence in their work and themselves. Future Business Leaders of America provided opportunities for students to succeed at projects, activities, and competitive events. They prepared for the State Leadership Conference competition and developed skills that are necessary to succeed in their chosen occupations. F.B.L.A. members became actively involved in community service by providing meals for the needy during Thanksgiving and Christmas. They raised money for their trip to Rochester. They also participated in The Walk For Life for the Breast Cancer Foundation.

Bobby Hulse said that F.B.L.A prepared him for the corporate world and it showed real life experience. Through projects and activities, students applied many human relation skills which will be of use to the the as students and as effective members of the corporate world.

MUSICALLY SPEAKING

Conductor Mr. R. Burns led the String Ensemble at the ceremony honoring the Barbash family for their generous contribution to the students.

As the custodians made their rounds on Monday nights, the timeless sounds of string instruments filled the dark halls. With the synchronized movements of bows gliding across strings, musical masterpieces from Vivaldi to Jimi Hendrix breathed life into the desolate building. Mr. R. Burns and the String Ensemble were again hard at work preparing for one of their many performances. Included this year was a performance at the National Association of School Boards in Florida. All school boards in the country were represented, creating an audience of more than ten thousand people. Understanding the honor it was to be selected, the members of the String Ensemble undertook the challenge to live up to the prestigious honor.

But more than hard work, the String Ensemble members shared a bond of understanding and respect with each other and their conductor. This intricate thread was what allowed the notes that emanated from their instruments to blend and flow together, creating a language all its own.

-Leigh Ann DeGeorge

With perfect posture and bow in hand, Tasneem Hoque waited for her turn to play.

TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE

(right inset)Jamine Aponte smiled nervously as she waited in the wings before the winter concert. (below)The wind section,which only practiced on certain days, was an intergal part of the symphony orchestra.

The fourth period bell rang, and the swinging doors of the third floor orchestra room banged open and closed as students entered for their fourth period rehearsal. The room filled with a strange mix of voices and music as friends chatted and instruments were tuned through a thick fog of rosin. They gathered their sheet music and wove their way through an ocean of music stands. These young, dedicated, musicians took their seats among their fellow aspiring musicians.

The bellowing voice of conductor Mr. R. Burns brought them to attention, and one by one their instruments were raised. With a few words of advice and the flick of a baton, the room exploded with the wondrous sounds of such pieces as Mozart's "Divertimento I" and the well known theme to "Star Wars". The skill and versatility with which they played left onlookers and passers-by astonished.

The tradition of excellence was obvious at every concert that the orchestra gave. This group is reknowned for the professional sound it created and the ease with which it has mastered some of the most intricate pieces of classical music.

FAITH AROUND THE FLAGPOLE

On a cold September morning when the sun was barely up, members of the Bible Club were found circling the school's flagpole, celebrating the national event known as "See You at the Poles," where at exactly seven AM students all over the western hemisphere of the globe joined hands to pray.

Keeping their backs to the wind and taking off their hats in respect, the members of the Bible Club made one of their few public appearances. Every member's face was shadowed with emotion; every look appeared to say, "We are here for each other; we are here for our school; we are praying for the world we know."

Facilitated by Mrs. A. Pfeffer, the club members met every Thursday to discuss the issues in their lives that could be re-directed and reflected upon through devotional scriptures. Wary of the problems caused by the mixture of church and state, the students did not practice religion but expressed their shared ideas and beliefs in a way that helped their sometimes overwhelming teenage lives make more sense.

"The club is so rewarding in so many ways, it helped us to make school an extension of our learning process both mentally and spiritually," said junior Josh Nock.

The club was at its most active during the holiday season, when its twenty-five members made up of Christian students from all over Bay Shore were busy preparing food baskets for the needy and providing various services throughout the community.

YOUTH IN THE NEWS

It's on TV; it's in the newspaper; we see it every day- students in trouble with the law, our youth in the spotlight of crime and violence. But that was not always the case at Bay Shore High School. To prove this, Bay Shore started the Service Honor Society, a program designed to give students recognition for doing good for their community. To be inducted into the Service Honor Society, a students must earn 240 points volunteering their time and energy, making an effort to make a difference in the world around them.

The S.H.S. is a unique program that brings a sense of immense accomplishments as well as overwhelming satisfaction. Mrs. Ponzi described it best when she said, "It really renews my faith in the essential goodness, intelligence, and spirit of young people in the world where there is so much negative, and to see so many young people who have given so generously is an uplifting experience."

Perhaps the most satisfying feeling of all was that the number of new members each year almost doubles. Now that's good news!

EXCELLENCE WITH HONORS

(inset right) President Tasneem Hoque called the meeting to order.

Over the four years of high school students worked extra hard to achieve good grades in the hopes of graduating with honors. Seniors, who have maintained a minimum B+ average and have shown leadership and involvement in school and community activities, were awarded the prestigious distinction of being inducted into the National Honor Society.

At the winter induction ceremony, five new members were added to the roster, including senior Anthony Patterson who said, "I was so surprised to find out that I was going to be nominated and then inducted into the society, especially after I had been in PM school for a year and a half."

The club which met bi-weekly was dedicated to performing service to the school and the community and providing leadership to the student body.

Under the leadership of president Tasneem Hogue and advisor, Mr. G. Schechter, the club made leaps and bounds in becoming more involved in community matters. Members could be found in the library during free time tutoring other students or caring for the elderly around Christmas time.

The Honor Society did its best to maintain the tradition of excellence in Bay Shore Schools.

As stars filled the night sky, rising stars took their places on the auditorium stage for the annual fall drama production by the Thespian Troupe. Working with director, Mr. J. D'Antoni, students accepted the challenge of developing the intricate British roles in the classic Agatha Christie murder-mystery story, "Witness for the Prosecution." Audience members were impressed with the level of acting and the concentration of the performers who managed to keep the spectators in complete suspense. For students, such as veterans Kelly Striplin and Keith Herrador, it was hard to say good-bye to the stage and the many friends that they have made.

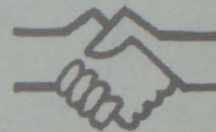

Behind the scenes the members of the backstage crew equally had their work cut out for them as they persevered to create the double set required for the show. The "floating wall" allowed the crew to create the interiors of both a barrister's office and an English courtroom. Under the artistic eye of Mrs. C. Jones the backstage crew worked long and hard to complete the sets in time for opening night.

For these stars of the stage it was another glowing success. Audiences were shocked to learn the truth as the gunshots were fired in the closing moments of the trial.

When the eighth period bell rang on Wednesday afternoon, many students hurried to their lockers and proceeded to leave the building, but not the Peer Support members. These students gave up their own time to prepare themselves by learning strategies to help their fellow students.

Peer support is an organization that teaches students how to help people talk about their problems and also learn how to deal with them. Interested volunteers were required to fill out an application, get two teacher recommendations, and also write an essay stating the reasons for becoming a peer support member.

All members attended the awareness weekends and contributed to the group activities and discussions. "Mr. J. McGowan, the organizer of the group has the biggest impact on all of us," said junior Michelle Spudis. The message for all in attendance was that there are people here in the High School eager to help others through their problems. No one should feel alone. If someone has a problem, there is always a Peer Support person ready to lend a helping hand.

- This year's Art Club was new and different and focused on exploring challenging projects in the area of sculpture. The club members agreed that molding the clay with their hands and on potters' wheels was a lot of fun and different from most of their art experiences in their regular courses. Following the style of Alexander Calder, these budding artists created fascinating mobile and wire sculptures.

They also worked on a variety of clay pots and vases before moving on to projects with wood and plaster. Advised by Mrs. N. Sherman, the art club met on Monday's after school, and the enthusiastic members spent two hours in a totally hands-on experience. In a relaxed atmosphere in the art room, students conversed about their work and took pride in their accomplishments.

- "The Art Club helped me to explore my artistic capabilities," said senior Aristole Dreher. "The art club was a lot of fun, and we all had a chance to see our creations take shape."

The world of journalism is a fast-paced jungle, where reporters strive to track down and capture the one story that will make their careers. For the young journalists of the Maroon Echo staff it was no different. Their already hectic student lives were compounded with the added responsibility of full-fledged reporters. Each of them did their best to bring the news of the school and community to the student body. Events, such as the extravagant Homecoming celebration, and important issues, such as the newly upgraded security system, received extensive coverage in the paper.

The staff also experienced an increase in membership with the addition of Mr. D. Weinstein's new journalism class. This group of enthusiastic students, along with the other talented writers and photographers of the organization, all worked together to make the Maroon Echo one of Long Island's top contending student newspapers.

"This is a very bright and self-motivated group," said Editor-In-Chief Gabrielle Nistico. "I think this year's staff has made it possible for the Echo finally to become a student run organization."

THE VOCAL WORLD

Unlike the band concert that was canceled due to a snowstorm, the choir gave an outstanding performance at their winter concert on December 14, 1995.

Each day the harmonious sounds echoed into the gym lobby as the choir began warming up for another rehearsal in the Little Theatre.

Since the first day of practice all of the choir members made a commitment to dedicate themselves to the group and to develop their voices to their fullest vocal potential.

The choir members worked diligently all year trying hard to master different techniques and expanding their range.

In addition to the full concert choir which was taken as an elective, students could also audition for several select groups such as the mixed Octet or the Madrigals. The Octet is a mixed choir which consisted of two sopranos, two altos, two basses, and two tenors. The music chosen was traditional and extremely challenging. The Madrigals were very talented female singers with excellent voices and the ability to dance as well as sing.

The entire choir agreed that seeing the look on the audience's faces after performing is what really made all of the hard work and long hours of practice worthwhile.

(below) Despite the pouring rain, Vicki Hausken and Joy Gaines kept their eye on their music and the drum majors at this year's Homecoming performance.

No matter where you looked or what television channel you watched, the Marching Band was there. Turn on the Columbus Day Parade and guess what group was performing in front of Macy's? Watch the treelighting ceremony at the EAB Plaza and guess who was the host band? Attend the christening of the new walk-through on Main Street, and you guessed it- the Marching Band was performing there too.

It was a hectic season for the Marauder Marching Band, Dance Line, and Color Guard. It seemed as if they were on the go constantly, and had more requests than they could handle. But what better group to invite to a pep rally or a Renaissance kick-off! They not only looked terrific but sounded great also. Their lively dance steps, drill routines, and impressive choreography, dazzled live audiences at these functions and home football games. In addition, the New York viewing audiences were treated to a spectacle that enhanced the holiday spirit.

Year after year, Director Mr. T. Scalzo and his staff and band members are able to come up with a more impressive show than the previous year's.

KEEPING THE BEAT ALIVE

It was impossible for anyone listening to the Jazz Band and the Concert Band to sit still. From the first explosion of sound, toes tapped and hands pounded out the beat. With a repertoire consisting of lively tunes like the "C-Jam Blues" and "Cielito Lindo" from such greats as Duke Ellington and John Williams, the Jazz Band and the Concert Band lived up to their reputations of performing outstanding music.

The Jazz Band and the Concert Band exuded captivating sounds by practicing every week. The conductor, Mr. T. Scalzo, made the bands work hard in their rehearsals until they reached a perfect harmony. The bands played with a lot of feeling and dedication and performed the best of their repertoire in each concert, the bands played in the Pops Concert and at the annual spring concerts.

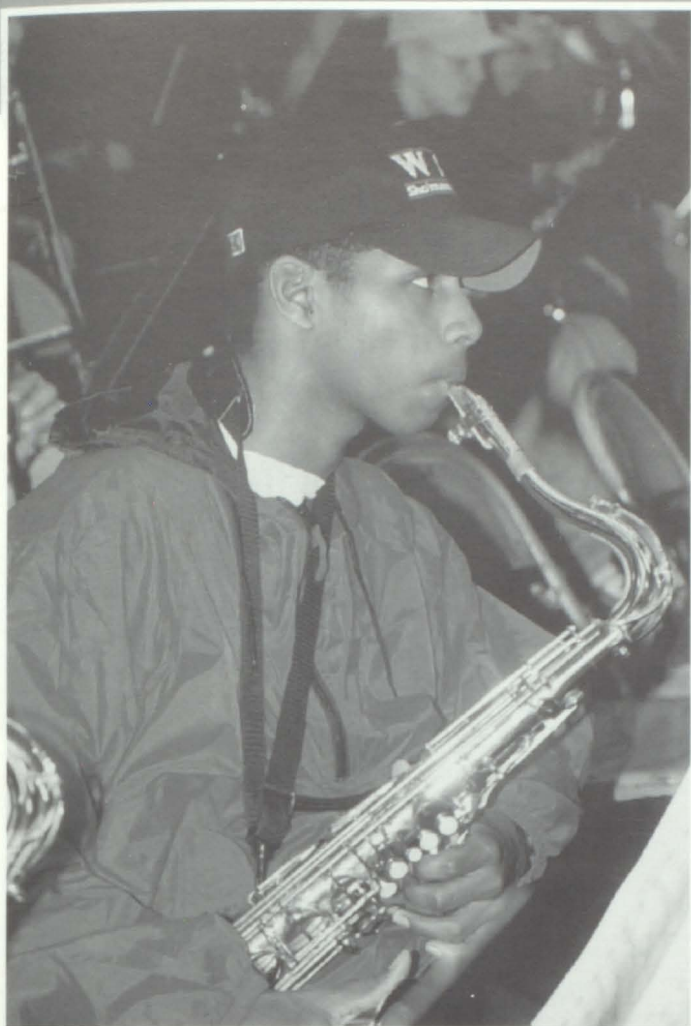

Among its accomplishments this year, the Jazz Band recorded a live tape to enter a band contest which has as its first prize a chance to play at the Lincoln Center. Both bands left people cheering and feeling good right down to the bottoms of their souls.

ABRIENDO NUEVAS PUERTAS

Ingrid Muj Cuj was born in a little town in Guatemala where she has lived for eleven years in a one bedroom house with no running water or electricity. Her family income has been $45.00 a month, and as a result she has never had professional medical care, bought a new dress, played with a doll, or gone to school.

This was all changed when the members of the Latino Club started exercising their new motto: "Abriendo Nuevas Puertas," or "Opening New Doors." With $140.00 raised from sponsoring a charity dance, raffles, and candy sales, the club was able to adopt little Ingrid and make a big impact on her life. Suddenly, she and her family could afford luxuries that in the past they had only dreamed about owning. Ingrid received birthday and Christmas presents for the first time in her life.

Achieving this goal was not easy and required constant dedication and hard work from the members of the club who gained a great deal of satisfaction knowing that they had helped Ingrid and provided her with medical care during a recent illness.

While most of the club's time was spent on helping Ingrid, the members did manage to make a trip to The Big Apple Circus in New York City. They also attended Hispanic Heritage Conferences which were designed to teach "los paisanos" more about their ethnic background.

The club lived up to its new motto and opened many new doors for Hispanic Americans.

In addition, B.S.O.S.S. was a vital organization that distinguished itself for the many services it provided to the school and the community. With the help of advisor Mr. N. Certain, B.S.O.S.S. devoted much of its time and energy to helping needy families in the community. It also raised money at sports events and dances to subsidize its charitable activities. The money that was raised also was used to increase its prestigious scholarship fund.

A special Kwanzaa display was constructed this year in the front lobby to help make students more conscious of the holiday. A special celebration was held in the school cafeteria which included traditional dances and songs.

B.S.O.S.S. was an integral part of the extra-curricular activities and an important part of our world in Bay Shore.

AND THE AWARD GOES TO . . .

Did Steven Spielberg start out this way? Perhaps he too began his cinematographic career in high school with equipment similar to that found in room 325, home of the Sights & Sounds organization.

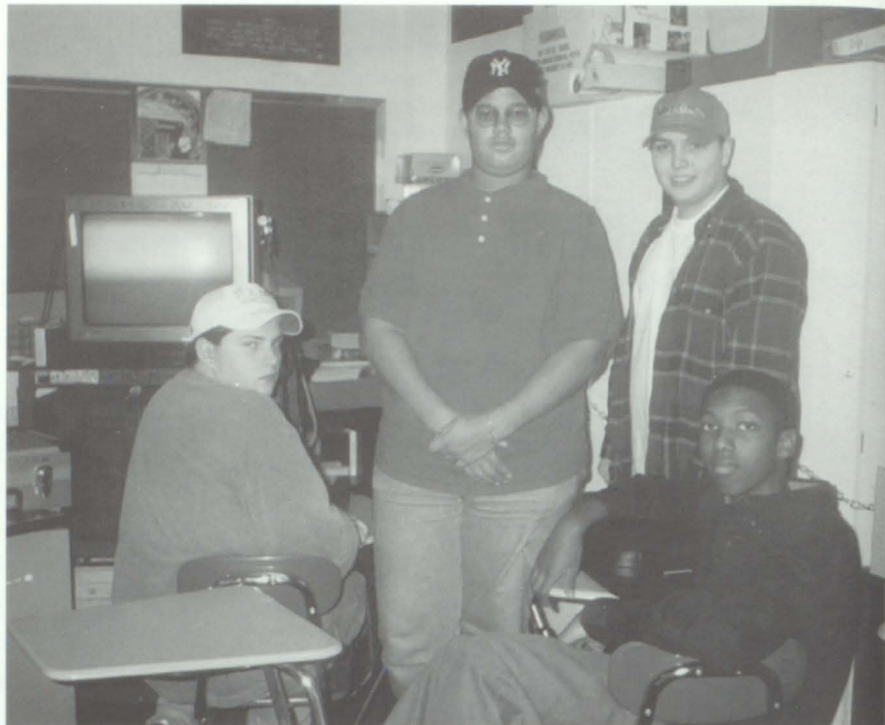

Two years ago, enthusiastic advisor Mr. R. O'Neill started Sights & Sounds at the request of some of his film studies students who wanted to further their understanding of film making and editing. In addition to his English course in film study, Mr. R. O'Neill met once a week with his Sights & Sounds crew to teach them about the popular field of videography. He also conducted workshops in directing, producing, and editing.

With a handful of members, Mr. R. O'Neill set out to teach his students the intricacies of film making while providing an invaluable service to the school. Among the club's many activities was the task of videotaping all of the major events held in the auditorium. Whether it was a theatrical production, music concerts, or Renaissance assembly, the Sights & Sounds crew was on hand to make video memories for the school.

Each year Mr. R. O'Neill adds another piece of equipment to keep his lab up-to-date with some of the latest technology. Who knows maybe some day one of his students may just go on and win an Academy Award.

A weekend full of laughter and tears, troubles and fears. It's hard to express all of the emotional feelings shared during awareness weekend. Students, faculty members, and guest speakers went to enlighten themselves and others of the problems that people go through everyday.

One keynote speaker who had been to a numerous number of awareness weekends was Steve McDonald, a former New York City police officer. His story touched many lives and made people more "aware" of the dangers in the real world that involve violence.

Another key speaker who had a tremendous impact on many students was Leroy Gould, a recovering drug addict. His story explained how hard it is to overcome a drug habit and all the hardships that go along with it. His story especially touched Jessica Stas, a senior, who said, "Leroy's story really made me look at myself and realize that I wasn't walking on the right path. I realized it is time for me to change."

Some people went to the weekend hoping to change and reform themselves. And for some like Jessica their hopes have now become a reality.

BRAINS WITH BRAWN

Lauren Fischetti, Jillian Murray, and Christine Dibble creatively concoct new ideas for the next meeting.

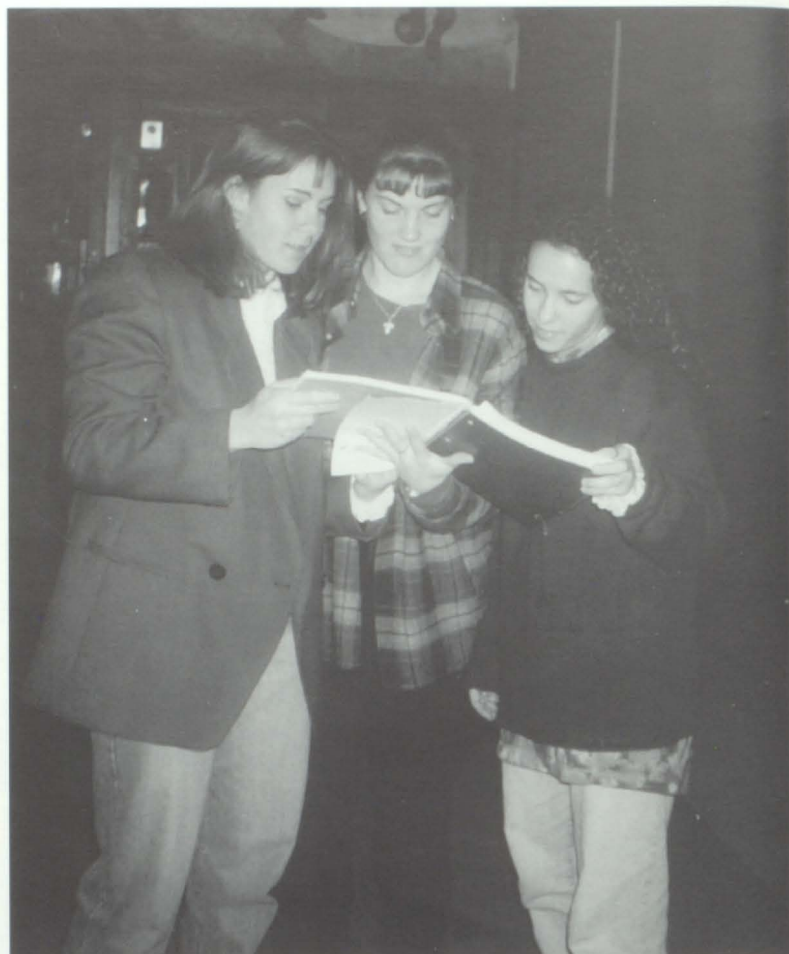

Dumb jocks? I don't think so! The twenty-five students who were members of the Student-Athlete Leadership Club were academically sound, drug free, varsity athletes who were recommended by their coaches.

The Student-Athlete Leadership Club, headed by Ms. E. Eckman and Mr. P. Todaro, was responsible for organizing fund raisers, food drives, and three-on-three basketball tournaments in order to raise money to help the needy in the community. The three-on-three basketball tournament alone raised over six hundred dollars. The student-athletes also volunteered their time to help with the Special Olympics. Once a year the members of the club made a trip to the Middle School to make presentations about the negative effects of drugs on athletes.

As the S.A.L.C. directors, Ms. E. Eckman and Mr. P. Todaro, handled the business matters of the organization while the students were actually responsible for the scheduling and planning of activities. Ellie Gerdes stated, "I enjoyed working with other people, especially with the challenged kids who went to the special olympics."

(right) Yolanda Little admired the care and love that went into the sewing of the quilt.

What can students do to help fight a killer disease? The A.I.D.S. educators were willing to take the first step: educating their peers. This group of students has spent many exhausting hours in training with Mr. E. Hyshiver, from the Suffolk County Health Department, Mr. J. Quinlan, and Mrs. R. Bonanno. At the end, they gained more information that the average person knows. With all this knowledge, they made four trips to the Middle School in order to teach about S.T.D.s, teenage pregnancies, H.I.V., and A.I.D.S.

Not only were they busy training and teaching, but they also were reaching out to the public by handing out pamphlets and red ribbons on World A.I.D.S. Day. They developed an assembly program for the staff and students on December 11, in hope that they would reach other students and inform them about the dangers of unprotected sex and drug use. The educators invited Emily Varga as a guest speaker, who herself is afflicted with A.I.D.S. She spoke of her symptoms and how she acquired the virus leading to her disease. After the assembly, many students said that they now understood the scope and magnitude of the problem.

The A.I.D.S. educators provided an immense service to their school by educating their peers so that this disease does not continue to spread even further.

A HELPING HAND

No other organization took over the world of community service like the Interact Club. With a new advisor this year, Mrs. P. Parker, the club took on a new look and atmosphere for the year's activities.

The Interactors started their year with a successful Christmas party for the elderly at which everyone played bingo, danced, and ate all kinds of Christmas foods. In school, the members sold candy canes to raise money and later sang Christmas carols for the sick children in Southside Hospital.

The club continued its work with "Habitat for Humanity" and gave a hand in building a house for a needy family in Central Islip. Their profits from their yearly fashion show bought materials for the house.

In the spring, the club was once again very successful in providing the senior citizens with lots of fun and pleasure as it hosted its annual April in Paris Dance. Interactors looked forward to seeing the familiar faces of their "grandparents" who came to dance the night away.

The members of the Interact Club enjoyed their opportunities to work with the community and in lending a hand to people in need.

SAVING LIVES

(left) Officers, Kelly Schroder, Nicole Farrell, Debra Dennis, and Maryellen Seplavy planned events and activities for the entire group.

(below) Niki Farrell, Mr. G. Broadhurst, Lisa Leigha, and Toni Ann Russolello brought their message of concern to the community in the Homecoming Parade.

When the sun set on our part of the world, many of our roadways turned into traps for motorists and pedestrians who encountered intoxicated motorists. One organization taking action to combat highway accidents and fatalities was S.A.D.D. The Students Against Driving Drunk dedicated themselves to finding a solution to this problem which each year claimed more and more lives.

With their advisor, Mr. G. Broadhurst, the members of S.A.D.D. were determined to spread their message, "Think before you drink." Through bulletin board displays, daily announcements, and banners in the annual Homecoming parade, the message was always the same. On prom night students distributed keychains with the S.A.D.D. logo and manned a hotline service for anyone who needed transportation.

"We hope to make a difference," said junior Kelly Schroder, "by keeping students aware of this problem and the asking them to consider the consequences before they get behind the wheel."

As the hard drives booted up and the keys clicked, the computer club struggled to outsmart the brain teasing games posed by advisor, Mr. D. McGilvray.

The computer club which met once a week, aimed at improving keyboard skills while trying to surpass previous levels of combat. All of the members had their own secret passwords in order to get into the computer server network. Most of the time they just had fun playing games and trying to beat each other's records. The members also had the chance to learn and study such things as basic and pascal programs. If they really wanted to be challenged, they had the opportunity to create their own programs.

Andrea Montalvo said that she felt it was a great opportunity to be able to use the computers, even if they were just for fun, since that they are used so extensively in the modern world.

NUMBERS IN COMPETITION

John Greene went to work as soon as the clock started.

As the afternoon sun faded, some students gathered in the large cafeteria to meet their opposition from neighboring Islip schools to determine who the best math students are. While some students find math problems challenging and somewhat overwhelming, other students enjoy the stimulation and the challenge. Solving an intricate problem is like putting together the pieces of a puzzle. Sitting with questions that were far more difficult than any seen in regular math classes, these students represented their school and helped Bay Shore to place in the top 40% of schools in Suffolk County. Unlike other teams there was very little, if any, interaction with the opponents who sat across from each other and studied the unique problems.

According to advisor, Mr. R. Lukaschek, "These students are some of Bay Shore's finest. They are outstanding students who brought recognition to themselves and their school." Following weekly competitions, the math team entered county and division championships.

LAW AND ORDER

(right) Albert Schombs and Robert Washko rehearsed their roles as lawyer and witness so that they could win their case.

Law cases and trials received a great deal of attention in the past year. The O.J. Simpson trial was over in October, but the case continued in the civil courts with new charges being made against the celebrity. Other cases also made the news, and the aspiring legal minds of the Mock Trial Team followed the developments very closely. This year's competition focused on a trial involving a drunk-driving hit and run case. Susan and Elizabeth Carpenter teamed up with Andrea Montalvo as the defense attorneys, while Evelyn Dahab, Lucy Montalvo, and Vicki Hausken served as the attorneys for the plaintiff.

Advisor Mr. R. Richardson was extremely hopeful of this year's team which he described as "a blending of experienced players and young, interested, and extremely talented novices." Although he can never predict how well the team can do, he knew that it would be an exciting and rewarding experience for all those involved as attorneys and witnesses.

The Mock Trial Team worked hard to live up to the outstanding accomplishments and successes of its predecessors and to make sure that law and order prevailed.

FOR LEGAL MINDS ONLY

Is there a club or activity designed solely for underclassmen? While most programs are for all grade levels, there are a few specifically limited to freshmen and sophomores. There are student council groups and Freshmen Leadership programs, and in addition, there is the Moot Court Team. Created in 1991 by social studies teacher Mr. R. Richardson, the main function of the program was to improve self-confidence and public speaking skills. "The Team gives students," said Mr. Richardson, "an opportunity to express themselves in an assertive way and gain confidence in themselves as well." It is the only one of its kind on Long Island.

Throughout the year the Moot Court Team studied over one hundred law cases and criminal suits and then re-enacted them in the courtroom. This gave the students a totally new perspective of the law as they played the roles of attorneys and witnesses. Mr. Richardson served as both the advisor and the judge in these trials.

The Moot Court Team was an excellent preparation for those students who aspired to the Mock Trial team when they become upperclassmen. It was a terrific experience and increased the participants' awareness and understanding of the world of law.

WELCOME TO OUR WORLD

With one graphic arts and one creative writing class, Mrs. C. Jones and Mr. J. D'Antoni set out early in September to begin work on another volume of the Marauder yearbook. The first task for the eager and ambitious students in these classes was to become familiar with the jargon associated with the printing industry and especially the yearbook and literary magazine.

Their next task, perhaps the most difficult and challenging, was to select the theme, for the entire book would verbally and graphically revolve around whatever theme was mutually agreed upon. Many possibilities were considered until one was overwhelmingly approved. Since the High School is visible from Sunrise Highway and since our activities made up so much of our adolescent world, the theme- Our World from Sunrise to Sunset- sort of said it all.

Putting the book together required dedication and pride from the graphic symbols on each page to the articles and stories that made this year's book unique from all others. One goal guided the staff throughout the year and that was to make sure that this year's book was as good, if not better, than last year's so that the publication would continue to win awards.

As the sun set on another school year, the staff hoped that everyone would carry his memories of our world into the future with pride.

SPAGHETTI AND MEATBALLS

With the sound of opera in the background and the appearance of brightly dressed waiters and waitresses, the senior class' annual spaghetti dinner was another huge success. Teachers, parents, and students filled the south cafeteria on Wednesday, March 20 to enjoy the traditional pasta repast. Everyone in attendance enjoyed the food, prepared by De Natalie's Pizzeria, and the ambiance created by the senior class. The meal, consisting of spaghetti, meatballs, salad, and Italian bread, was served hot by the congenial waiters and waitresses who aimed to please their clientele. Some teachers brought their families like the Kaplars and Morrisons, and others, like Mr. D'Antoni and Mr. McGowan, brought their students and athletes.

This was the last fund raising event for the graduates with the funds going to defray the cost of the prom.

A MUSICAL WITH A HAPPY ENDING!

"Way out west on west end avenue," sang Libby, played by sophomore Crista Johnson, who tried to prove she was a western singer.

As the entire cast of the spring musical "Babes in Arms" came on stage for their final bows, all that could be heard throughout the theater was the cheers and applause from the audience as it rose to give the production a standing ovation. Once again the Bay Shore students and directors delighted and entertained their audiences with another fabulous musical.

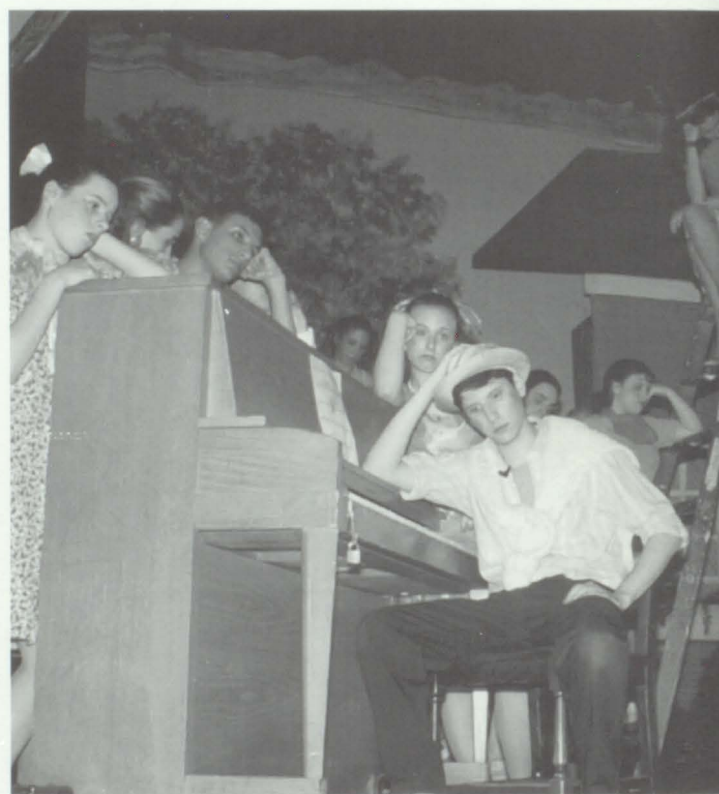

Following auditions in December, the students began an intensive rehearsal schedule with the choreographer, Mrs. S. Brenner, vocal director, Dr. C. Morrow, and production director, Mr. J. D'Antoni. The cast worked hard throughout the next three months as they mastered dialogue, blocking, and dance routines. "The hours of hard work were all worth while because the musical gave the students who were involved plenty of opportunities for them to show off their talent," said Dr. Morrow.

While the cast and crew worked afternoons, the pit orchestra under the leadership of Mr. D. Persia rehearsed evenings. Their sound gave the production a truly professional touch.

For Mrs. C. Jones, the creator of the spectacular sets, this play had special meaning. This production marked the end of her twenty-five year career as a set designer and backstage director. The cast and crew commemorated their performances to her as a tribute to her years of dedication and service to the theater arts programs.

As the curtain closed on Saturday night's performance, the audience marvelled at the talents and enthusiasm of the students, and the cast looked forward to next year's production.

The World of Sports played an important part in the lives of all of the athletes this year. With many teams starting practice in the heat of August to the cold of the blustery winter and into the rainy days of spring, the athletes were visible getting into shape and preparing for their seasons. They worked hard, developed skills, and enjoyed the thrill of success and the agony of defeat. Whatever the sport, track, football, cheerleading, lacrosse to name a few, athletics gave the students something to look forward to at the end of a day of classes.

Besides improving their game, the athletes learned what it meant to set goals and work to achieve them. They learned lessons that will accompany them long into the future. They enjoyed the spirit of the game and the feeling of teamwork and camaraderie of working with their peers and coaches. They always gave their best and hoped to make it into the playoffs.

As the sun fades at the end of the day, Bay Shore's athletes leave the school tired but with a sense of accomplishment.

SPORTS

Phil McCollum kept his eye on the ball as Mark Warth caught it in the dirt.

At the start of the season, the players on the Varsity team all believed they could make it to the championships this year. With ten returning players they were one of the best teams in League III and one of the best in the county. With an excellent coaching staff, including Mr. D. Maloney and Mr. P. Todaro, the players strongly believed they had a winning combination.

Bay Shore picked up enthusiasm after last year's discouraging season. The boys were dedicated to the sport and proved it by attending practice at six o'clock in the morning to get themselves prepared to offer no mercy to any team that came their way. The Junior Varsity, coached by Mr. V. Agoglia, showed similar dedication and hard work as the players prepared for their upcoming years on the varsity team. The team's positive attitude and persistent drive would lead the team through another successful season.

Pressure was hardly the word to describe what the girls' softball team and Coach Mr. J. McGowan had to endure coming into this year's season.

With a 54-0 record for the previous two seasons, the girls had to give 100% of their effort and more time more than they would have ever imagined to maintain the teams' reputation and record. The girls rose to the occasion by attending practice six days a week and as late as midnight on certain days. They put all their energy, hearts, and souls into every practice and game, knowing that if they worked hard, it would pay off in the end.

With eight returning players, including four seniors, the team came together with determination, perseverance, and a challenging goal. Jill Chichester, a senior on the softball team said, "As long as we reach for our full potential, I believe we will always be successful."

The junior varsity team also had a successful season this year. Coached by Mr. J. Caputo, who was fairly new to the field of coaching, the girls worked well together and demonstrated their spirit at all time to make the most of the season.

The interest in volleyball was at a high this year when sixty girls tried out for the varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams. Practicing six days a week for two and a half hours each day, the girls worked hard for every point they earned. Coach Ms. E. Eckman was optimistic about the season. She and the varsity team aimed for a winning record and a trip to the playoffs. But more than that, both teams aimed to have fun and demonstrate good sportsmanship.

"It doesn't matter if we win or lose. As long as we all play together as a team; in our minds we won." said junior Michelle Spudis, a member of the JV team. The members of the JV team, coached by Mr. J. Bayer, had fun and success and set their sights on playing on the varsity level next year.

Giving it every ounce of effort possible the girls played with enthusiasm, making sure to always work as a team.

This year's lacrosse team entered the season with high expectations and ambitious goals.

Losing nine seniors was not easy to overcome, and coaches Mr. R. Damore and Mr. T. Cox dealt with a lot of stress to meet their goals. "We wanted to improve our record, have a winning team, and make the playoffs," said Mr. Damore. The players worked hard each day throughout the practice season and went on to win their first game against East Islip. They looked very promising and kept their enthusiasm to the close of the season.

"This year's team has a lot of potential and if we all pull together we will do very well, we have the best coaches and 'we won't die if we unify.'"

Practicing their backhands!

"I hope we can move the desire and enthusiasm of the players to a winning team," said Coach Mr. C. Jones.

As the rays of sun lit up the tennis court, the members of the boys' tennis team enjoyed the fresh air as they began their daily workout. At the first signs of spring, the shorts and rackets came out and practices began. Working hard and spending hours of practice improving their skills, the players prepared for the grueling season that lay ahead.

Coach Mr. J. Morrison hoped that the season would go well and that the team would qualify for the county playoffs. To do that they would have to work on their skills and especially their backhand shots. Coach Mr. C. Jones was just as optimistic for his JV team. The team was young but powerful and extremely dedicated.

Louis LoCastro, with a powerful swing, returned the serve to his opponent.

Ryan Reyes soared through the air in his attempt to perfect his long jump.

As the snow began to melt off the field and track, the track team began preparing for another dynamic season. With past championships as an inspiration the teams were determined to maintain their past level of achievement.

With their grueling practices and intense love for competition, the girls practiced regularly and could be seen running around the community at all times of the day. Led by experienced coach Mr. L. Pena, the team undoubtedly continued its record of excellence.

Their equally talented counterparts on the boys' team were just as determined in their quest for perfection. With determination, heart, hard work, and the coaching of Mr. Hawkins, they planned on making this season as impressive as their past ones.

A new team of motivated and anxious learners appeared on the lacrosse field in early March ready to play. Although the team wasn't as experienced as its predecessors, the players were willing to work hard and improve their skills. Coaches Mr. and Mrs. J. Pfeffer were pleased with the way the team looked and the energy displayed during practices.

They had a chance to prove themselves at their first game against Lindenhurst where they defeated the opposition with a rousing score of 23-8. The Lady Marauders were on the move and their competition had better beware. Goalie Jackie Torres showed off her talent as she defended the goal both in league games and local scrimmages. The girls set goals for themselves and aimed to win their division and county championships.

The JV team also worked hard to build up their skills. Under the guidance of Coach Miss M. O'Grady the players were optimistic and enthusiastic.

Justin Draycott grinned, once he had made a hole in one.

With the swing of the club cutting through the sun-warmed air, a silent hush swept over the audience as the members of the golf team concentrated on making the perfect putt. Knowing that the pride of the school rested on their shoulders, the twenty-one members of the team fought vigorously for the win at every meet.

Although the team was made up primarily of the same players as last year's, including returning Captain Adam Tucker, many of the players' overall performance was significantly enhanced by long hours of practice accomplished last summer. "Many of the players worked hard all summer on their games, and a year's more experience made a world of difference," said Coach Mr. B. Mahler.

For the players, the many hours on the green may have been spent working hard, but it often seemed more like fun than work. They were certain that the most important things they took away from this experience was the memories of the fun, laughter, tears, turmoil, and camaraderie that comprised the golf team.

Eric Buksa looked at his position on the field as he passed the ball.

As the fans left the soccer field at every game, they all seemed to have a feeling of complete and utter satisfaction, knowing that the varsity soccer players had put their all into yet another game. Their effort paid off this season, as they won a position in the division playoffs. With every game of sweat, pain, sunshine, and rain, the boys played to their absolute potential. Megan Hand, a huge fan of the team said, "Watching the boys is a feeling like no other; the excitement and enthusiasm at a game builds in each fan and when they win, it explodes into loud cheers and happiness. The feeling I get cannot be explained in words." At every game the numbers of fans built, and many times the Bay Shore fans outnumbered those from the opposing team, even at away games.

Coach Mr. J. Cody also accomplished an admirable feat this season as he reached his 200th win as a varsity soccer coach. He said, "It has been an honor to be a part of 21 teams that have become a part of Bay Shore's history." Not only will the varsity team go down in Bay Shore's history, they have had a tremendous impact on everybody who watches them.

Hard work paid off for the girls' soccer team which made it into the league playoffs this year.

The girls trained diligently every day, and they were inspired by their co-captains, Ellie Gerdes and Kim Shaw, who pushed the whole team to accomplish more. Many of the players regarded these two girls as the heart of the team.

Josie Rosado, who played midfield with great determination and gusto, gave to the team a steamy push to play better and better. Shannon Kelly, "the little giant," who played forward, was a marauder who fought for every ball.

The JV team had a lot of potential and worked to improve skills and strategies. The players showed overwhelming energy in every game. "They will be the stars of the future," said Coach Mr. V. Agoglia. Soccer is really a magnificent sport in which people get to know each other and be part of a team that really cares about its players.

As the sun set on a fall afternoon, the whistle blew, and an army of girls in plaid skirts charged up the field to hit the ball into the goal.

After the graduation of many of last year's members, the coaches didn't know what to expect from this season's team. However, they were pleasantly surprised by the new players' energy, enthusiasm, and spirit. It was these qualities that made the rebuilding process more fun and interesting. These new recruits changed the usual laps into "silly laps," where they pretended to be airplanes and flying ducks, and they wore a variety of talismans, ranging from stickers to charms.

"By the start of the games we had become a field hockey family, and we had reached the goal that every team strives for," said co-captain Jillian Murray. It was this closeness and camaraderie that helped them make it to the playoffs. The spirit of competition kept this group of girls working to reach the top of their division.

Jenaro O'Donnell liked looking at the world from a slightly different perspective.

As the sun sank into the horizon and most people began their evening routines, the members of the gymnastics team were leaving the high school after another day of grueling practice. With weary bodies and chapped hands, they headed home, the fire of dedication still burning in their eyes. Day after day they toiled trying to perfect their routines.

Often the last ones to leave were captains, Rob Knapp and William and Michael Ludwigsen, who lingered behind to discuss the team's strengths and weaknesses. Under their strong leadership and undying confidence the team excelled and represented Bay Shore with pride and dignity.

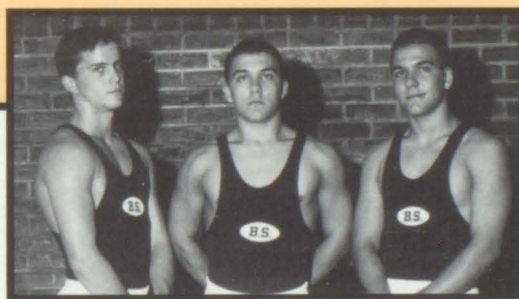

This strong 1995 team carried on the tradition of excellence that has become synonymous with gymnastics and achieved a proficiency beyond even their own expectations.

The cheerleading squad knew what it meant to practice from sunrise to sunset. Starting with stunt practice at 5:45 in the morning, the girls witnessed many a sunset from the overhead windows of the gymnasium.

The JV and Varsity teams were one big family this year. Under the leadership of co-captains, Elizabeth Munoz and All-American Krysti Corbett, these girls knew what it meant to work hard both on and off the field.

One of the major accomplishments of this year's varsity squad was being selected to attend the National Competition in Dallas, Texas. This honor was attributed to the power, perfection, and proficiency that these girls displayed in tournaments as they beat-out teams from all over the U.S. and Canada. Countless hours were spent working on a myriad of fund-raisers that helped in acquiring the ten thousand dollars needed for the team's expenses to go on the December trip.

Coached by Mrs. D. Kaplar for the past six years, the team's objective remained steadfast — to give other squads a run for their money! "These girls couldn't imagine life without cheerleading," she said.

-Gabrielle Nistico

Stunt practice helped the cheerleaders to master the improve their physical form and gain trust in each other.

The world of football is a world apart from any other sport or experience ever encountered during the high school years.

Starting with double sessions in August, the sound of the collision of helmets and pads echoed into the sunset for approximately eleven weeks. When asked what he wanted the Bay Shore community to remember most about this team, Coach Mr. T. Cox responded, "The team had a lot of pride; they worked hard and gave their greatest efforts on Saturday afternoons."

Joining Coach Mr. S. Sonkin, Mr. J. Giattino, formerly from Bellport, said that he felt the greatest difference between the JV Marauders and the Bulldogs of Bellport was in the amount of talent possessed by our players.

Their spirit and endurance remained intact right through to the final whistle.

As the sun beamed down onto the players of the varsity and junior varsity tennis teams during their practices, their red faces showed expressions of frustration and joy. They worked hard to match the level of excellence achieved by last year's team which had been ranked number one and pushed the team into a harder division.

One of the team's most competitive matches was against Half Hollow Hills. Though there were doubts that the team would not win, the players' consistent performance and persistent effort pulled them through to victory. "It takes a lot of practice and effort to achieve all that they have," said coach Mr. J. Morrison. He also added, "This team never ceased to amaze me. They were always displaying their adherence to being the best."

The junior varsity team was also very successful. Although they did not finish in the top of their division, they boasted many new players with a potential for excellence. Coach Mr. C. Jones said, "I look forward to next year's season with the new young players."

Racing to beat the setting sun, the Cross Country athletes ran through the streets of Bay Shore day after day improving their stamina and endurance. With a team motto of "Champions have Visions," the boys' finished with a four and one record. The success of the team was made possible through the undying dedication of its captains, Oslyn Gardner and Chris Pfeffer. Mr. R. Hawkins, the boys' coach said, "This year everyone on the team made a significant difference in growth and maturity. The team knew what to do, and I didn't have to stand over them."

While the boys' team was making a name for itself in the competitive world, the girls' team left its opponents in the dust. Undeclared the entire season, the girls made it to represent Bay Shore in the County Championships where they placed first for the third year in a row.

The track athletes all agreed that the best thing about Cross Country is the experience and the reward of self-achievement. They learned the meaning of devotion, perseverance, and commitment.

The varsity team was led by two seniors, Craig Filaski and Tim Sassone. Both were highly regarded by their teammates for their leadership ability. They led and inspired the team to practice long after the sun had set each day.

The junior varsity team also had a wonderful season. This year the team had a lot of experience on it due to the abundance of juniors. The juniors felt this team was more important to them than joining varsity and leaving the team with no leadership.

Always prepared for an emergency

(left) Paulette Hall grimaced in pain as her leg was wrapped with an ace bandage.

"Miss Hefke was a pleasant addition to the staff who stood always ready to help an athlete and get him back into the game." -Rob Knapp

"Help me, my hand is swollen! I'm in so much pain, and I've got a game to play!" screamed Sal Ippolito as he ran into the training room. He was greeted by Ms. J. Hefke's warm, soothing smile as she stood equipped with bandages and tape ready to work her magic to relieve the anguish of Sal and other football players.

With different athletes came a variety of different injuries. Everything, from a sprained ankle on a basketball player to a pulled shoulder on a wrestler, was tackled by the school's well-trained therapist.

A Bay Shore graduate from the class of 1987, Ms. Hefke studied at William Smith College, and earned her Masters Degree in sports medicine and psychology from the University of Oregon. Ms. Hefke provided an invaluable service to our athletes both in her office in the gym and out on the playing fields during home games throughout the year. Her professional assistance and support kept our athletes on their feet and ready for their next game. On certain days there was a line-up outside her office of students waiting for her services. She frequently left the building fatigued but proud of help she provided to her alma mater.

Year after year the gymnasium is always packed by fans supporting the boys' basketball team. Year after year they are never disappointed by the results of the game and the standing of the team in its division. Year after year the team has made it into the playoffs and made Bay Shore proud of its accomplishments.

With only five returning players, Bay Shore was not expected to field too challenging a team. But to everyone's surprise, the team worked unbelievably well together and exerted maximum effort at every game. Coach Mr. B. Mahler worked the team hard and squeezed every drop of sweat out of the players, but in the end it was all worthwhile when the team clinched a playoff spot with a victory over East Islip. The varsity players proved to the spectators and themselves that they knew how to hoop it up.

Shooting from the base line

The team may have been small, but the big heart of the members of the J.V. Basketball Team carried the players to new heights. The athletes learned to pull together and play as one. With a special self-respect and improved ball handling, the J.V. team reached a new peak of performance.

Every player had the self-discipline to stay focused before every game. "You never see one of the team members clowning around or goofing off during pre-game practice," said Coach Mr. H. Powell.

When the time came to choose captains, the J.V Basketball Team took an approach that no other teams had done. Rather than selecting permanent captains, it was decided that each member of the team would alternate the privilege of being the captain. That way each member would have the chance to feel the responsibility of being a leader.

Shooting to the top!

Early this season the girls' Varsity Basketball team set out to make this a memorable year, and with their diligence and hard work they certainly succeeded.

These determined young women practiced from Saturday mornings to late Friday evenings, perfecting their skills in an effort to build a solid, winning team. And with a final record of 18 wins and 2 losses, the girls seemed to have met their goal. Under the strong leadership of Coach Mr. K. Parham and the guidance of Captains, Ellie Gerdes, Janine Mazzie and Holly Hanna, these girls ranked number two in New York State and made a name for themselves as true athletes. They finished their season in an upsetting loss to Brentwood in the semi-finals.

Their "sisters," the Junior Varsity team, followed in a family tradition and showed the community that the future of Bay Shore Basketball was safe in their capable young hands. With the fresh ideas of first-time Coach Mr. D. Weinstein, the girls finished out the season ranking higher than they had in past seasons.

Winter Track

Racing for the finish line!

Consistency, perseverance, and desire were the qualities possessed by this year's winter track teams. Battling the elements each day the runners were often visible circling the track or charging through the streets of downtown Bay Shore in order to train themselves to become the very best. Whether it was sixty degrees or snowing outside, the runners were giving 100% of their energy to condition themselves for the season ahead.

From the girls' impressive accomplishment of being ranked fourth in the country to the individual achievements of each member, the runners gained the prestige and honor they deserved for their hard work. Erin Hayes broke the school record for the 800 meter relay medly, and Chante Daily broke the school record for the mile run. Joy Gaines tied the school high jump record. Brady Woods placed fourth in the county in the long jump, and Romaine Brissett placed third on the high hurdles. Steven Sansone and James Roberts were ranked in the top six in the county for the 600 meter.

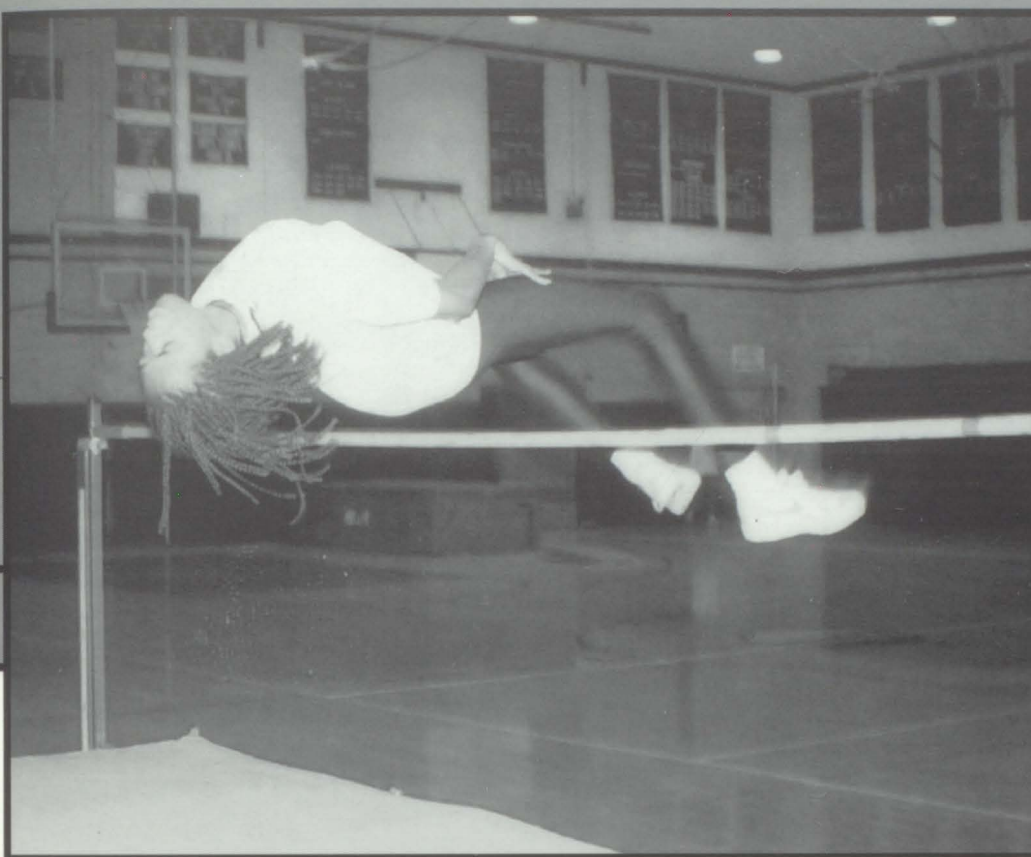

But what gave the runners this incredible drive to win? Laura Mina, a valuable asset to the girls' winter track team said, "The desire to win is enough to push you to achieve the goal for both the team and yourself." And win they did again and again. An avid follower of the teams' victories, Vincent Velez said, "Watching the girls, I can see how hard they really worked. It gives me a feeling of great admiration knowing that the runners have made a name throughout the country for themselves and the school."

Bowling

Time to spare

Whether it's bowling for dollars or just to see how many pins can be knocked down, bowling is a sport that has been enjoyed by players of all ages, including high school students. This year the members of the bowling team focused on improving their games. Practicing hard at each session the team members put forth their maximum effort and showed improvement with each passing day. With determination and pride each member of the bowling team concentrated intensely before rolling the ball down the alley to make the best of every shot.

The bowling team practiced hard each afternoon at the local lanes to master throwing the perfect hook. Under the guidance of Coach Mr. J. Morrison, they strived to give their all at every meet.

Team captain, Arnie Jonassen, provided the team with the necessary encouragement and leadership as he bowled the highest series in the league this year. His three-game score of 745 pins was the team record for this year.

Although the team did not make it into any division playoffs this year, the members agreed that their skills had improved tremendously, and they looked forward to playing again next season.

Wrestling

The most dedicated sport

Joseph Baglio and Daniel Boucher practiced a fireman's carry for their next meet.

The Varsity wrestling team exceeded its past records with many of its members surpassing their personal undefeated records. The J.V. team continued its perfect scores for the third year in a row.

Hours were dedicated by the members of both teams who worked hard to perfect their skills on the mats. Their true devotion for the sport was seen as they worked towards meeting their weight class by running for long periods of time and cutting down on food intake.

After watching them practice, one would think that these groups of athletes would be looking forward to the end of the season, Edgar Crespi stated, "We might sound like we want the end of the season to come, but the truth is that we love this sport, and we are not looking forward to the end of the season."

It was clear that it took a special kind of person to take on the mental and physical challenges of this demanding sport.

Underclassmen stood at the dawn of a world filled with new opportunities and experiences. The decisions students made as underclassmen would decide their futures.

Underclassmen dominated high school clubs and activities. They controlled the destiny of all athletic teams and extracurricular clubs. These students maintained all of the traditions at Bay Shore and helped create new ones. The students from grades nine through eleven carried a strong message to the community and proved that they were truly Renaissance citizens preparing to take their places in the world. Underclassmen went through many stages as they sought emotional, academic, and physical maturity. Freshmen started out exploring who they are and the type of person they want to be. Sophomores were dealing with the responsibilities of becoming an adult, while trying to hold onto the carefree lifestyle of their youth. Juniors started preparing themselves for the life ahead of them after their high school education.

Throughout the year the underclassmen realized that the responsibility for the activities and clubs in the building would fall onto their shoulders as the seniors graduated.

A New Beginning

At the sunrise of their high school career, the freshmen entered the hallowed halls of the building filled with fear and trepidation as they began the four-year journey that lay ahead. Those first few days seemed confusing and hectic, and many complained about how exhausted they felt at the end of a day of running up and down three flights of stairs. But all that quickly came to an end as the freshmen settled into the daily routine and accepted the new challenges presented to them. They quickly assimilated the behavior of their older peers and made friends with upperclassmen who shared gym classes and certain electives with them.

Along with the new classes and friends, the students began a new adventure full of new goals, new promises, and new dreams. "There was a great adrenaline rush waiting to start the first day of school. It continued right through the whole year," said Nabila Lester. The world of the freshmen was filled with fun, great learning experiences, and cherished memories.

Leaders of Tomorrow

The Freshman Leadership Club, made up of dedicated freshmen, worked hard to make to a difference in our world.

The club participated in many school activities throughout the year including contributins to the annual Thanksgiving drive. The members of the Freshman class agreed that it was a great feeling going that extra mile to give to those less fortunate who really needed assistance.

The present members of the freshman leadership club will have the responsiblity of working with the upcoming freshmen. Since they have already experienced the problems and frustrations of being in a new buildings, they stand ready to answer the questions and guide the incoming freshmen through the opening weeks of school. With doors always open to new members, Miss Sce assured the freshmen that they could always feel free to speak their mind without worrying about peer pressure.

In the Freshman Leadership Club, kids of today are learning to become better leaders for tomorrow.

Sweet Rewards

A spectacular and stunning set of jumps and routines by the cheerleaders kicked off the first Renaissance celebration. The marching band played, and students won prizes for their outstanding grades and accomplishments. The students in the audience went crazy applauding the entertainment and the accomplishments of their classmates.

The Renaissance program, with its rewards and business partnerships, continued to encourage students toward higher and higher goals. At the end of the first marking period cardholders were treated to ice cream sundaes in the cafeteria. They were given a period off from class and a chance to enjoy the companionship of their peers. In February, students received a heart-shaped lollipop on Valentine's Day along with their new Renaissance cards.

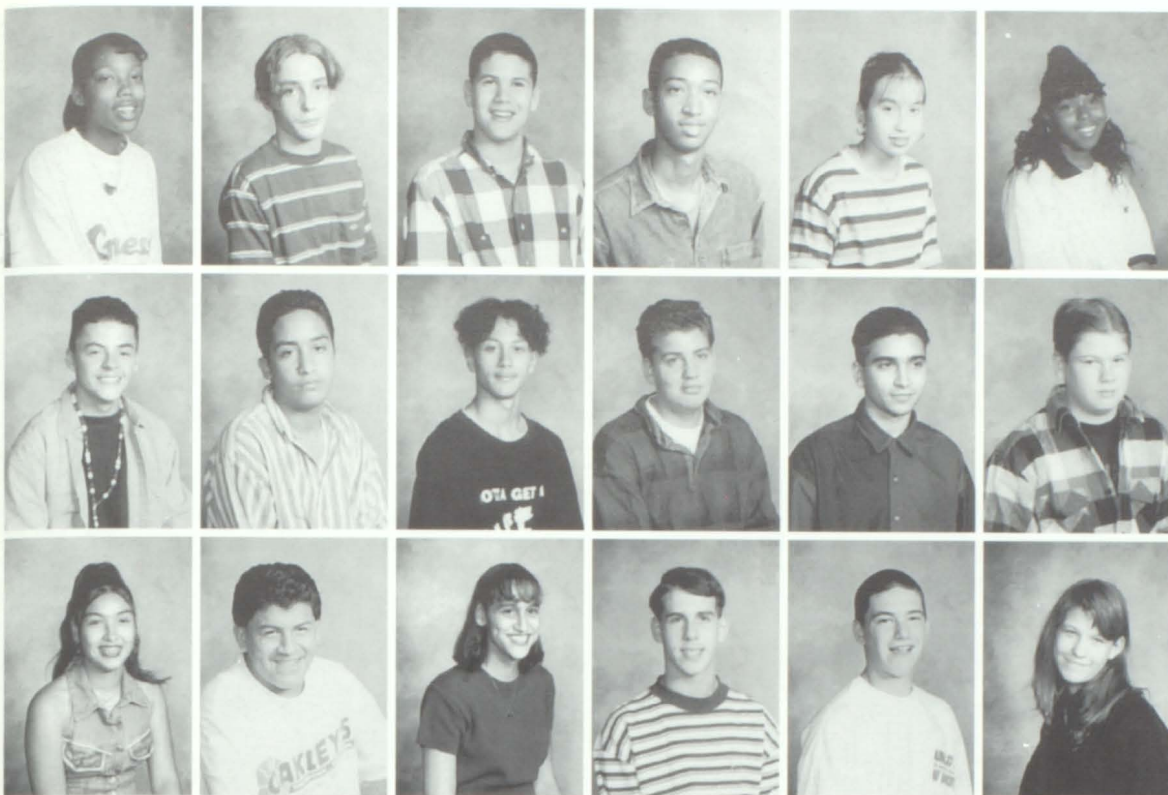

Students, spotted wearing Renaissance shirts, were entered in weekly raffles and drawings. The committee of staff and students worked throughout the year and kept the energy and enthusiasm of the Renaissance program alive.

Knowledge is Power

The Academic Club was designed for students who were looking for a stimulating challenge or a bit of a brain teaser. Students who excelled in their studies were always looking for new ways to outsmart each other.

To see who held the most knowledge or who was the quickest thinker, the members of the club participated in interscholastic activities and battled it out with other schools. Mr. D. Weinstein, the advisor, said, "All I wanted was for everyone to do their best and have a lot of fun."

At most of the meetings, the members debated their opinions on the deferent issues that they disliked. From time to time the club would divide itself into two teams to challenge each others' mental abilites. The winners proved to the rest that they truly held supreme knowledge.

The Breakfast Club

On a Saturday morning when most were “sleeping- in” some selected students arrived at the High School, but they weren’t here for any sport or after-school activity. They were here for the newly instated Saturday Morning Detention Program.

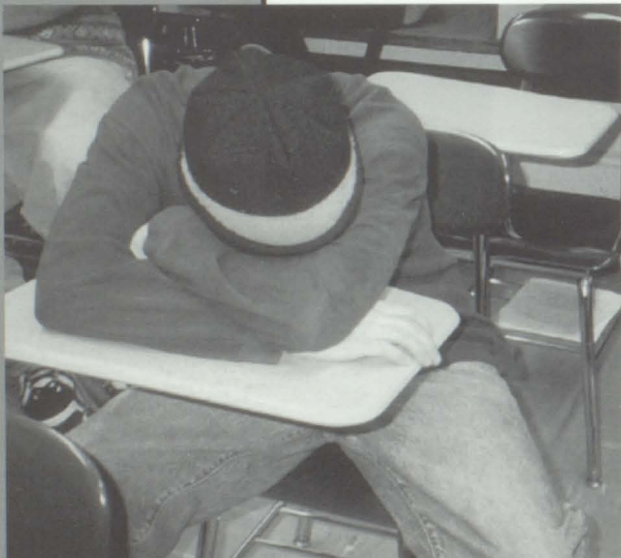

Saturday Morning Detention, run by Mr. K. Parham, started because of the poor attendance records of certain students. This program was instituted to help students learn that cutting class and truancy were wrong. Suspension would only provide such offenders with additional time out of class, so the Saturday detention became a viable alternative to the regular disciplinary measures.

Later on in the year the format was expanded to include other students who hadn’t cut but who had other problems such as fighting in school and substance abuse.

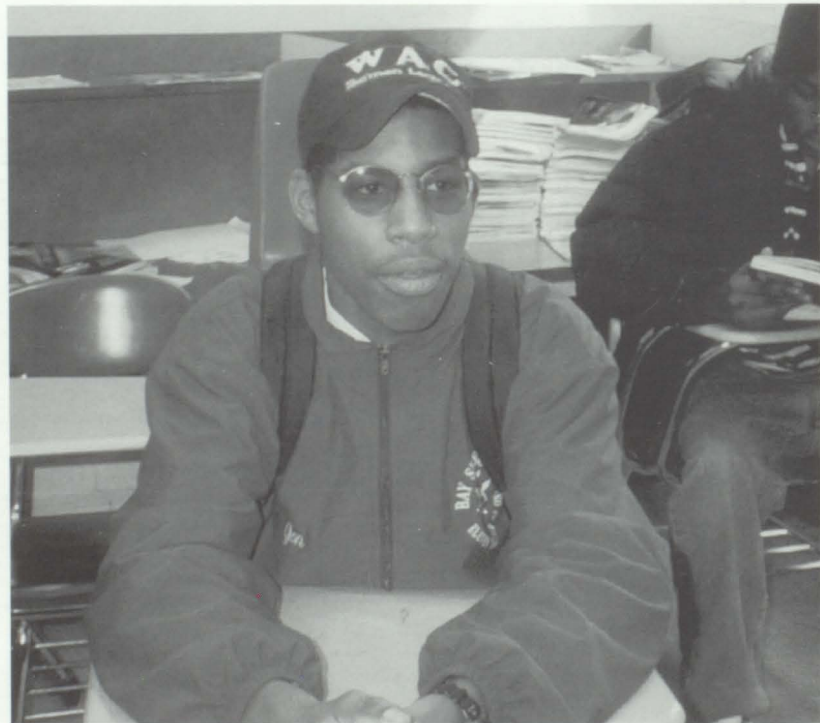

Although this was only the first year for Saturday morning detention, it accomplished a great deal. Almost all who attended came out a little wiser, knowing that they did not want to become permanent members of the breakfast club.

-Anthony C. Patterson

Spirited Sophomores

Sophomores have definitely made a place for themselves in the high school world. While the seniors prepared for commencement, the juniors were busy taking SATS and the freshmen were getting lost in the halls. What were the sophomores doing?

During the year, sophomore students could be seen spreading their spirit and added wisdom throughout the halls and classrooms. Knowing the ropes around the High School has given the Class of '98 many opportunities to get better involved. The tenth graders spent time at football games, cheering on their fellow classmates at the Academic Olympics, and attending class meetings. Some members of the sophomore class even took time out of their busy schedules to guide a lost freshmen to his next period class.

Perhaps the most important thing about being a sophomore was the experience of becoming a role model. No longer the youngest grade in the building, the class of '98 now had the eyes of the freshmen turned to them for guidance, and they handled the responsibility with dignity and grace.

Teachers for the Future

"We kind of keep to ourselves," said STATUS Advisor Mrs. C. Thompsett. "We are the quiet group."

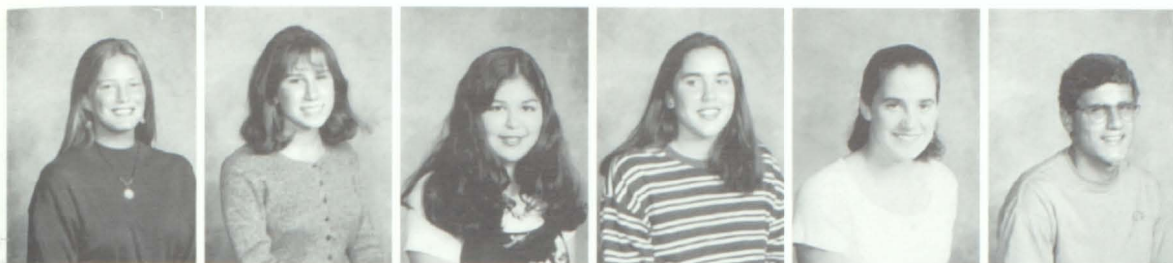

She was, of course, referring to the young ambitious group known as STATUS. The organization consisted of young people who were interested in careers in education who took time to help their community by offering their spare time to local elementary schools and working as teachers' aides. The members went to Fifth Avenue, Mary G. Clarkson, and South Country Schools directly from their own classes at the High School. There they worked with their "mentor" teachers until dismissal. Many of the young student-teachers hoped to someday pursue their own careers in education. The daily roles they played of both student and teacher gave them a unique insight into the skills and effect of their actions. Many found this insight invaluable when they returned to their own classes the next day. In addition to its student-teaching responsibilities, STATUS also raised money to provide a scholarship for its graduating members and to help the needy in the community. To reach these goals STATUS sold candy throughout the year. They sent two thousand dollars to the families of the Oklahoma bombing and also adopted a family at Christmas.

Food for Thought

In addition to the Renaissance program and the school Honor Rolls, another monthly way of recognizing outstanding student achievement was the Breakfast for Champions program. Each month selected students and their parents were treated to a full breakfast at the Forum Diner on Main Street. Chosen for their accomplishments in academic courses, athletics, extra curricula activities, P.M. School, and cultural arts, these students received a complimentary school shirt and heard a presentation from a distinguished Bay Shore graduate or member of the community. The guest speakers spoke about their personal accomplishments and how the schools helped them to become successful. Each left the students with personal words of encouragement for the future.

The entire program was funded by the merchants in the community who also displayed photographs of the monthly winners. Students were recognized for academic excellence, leadership, involvement in school activities, and support of community programs. Gustavo Rivas, nominated by Mrs. M. Petralia for his community service, said that he felt proud to receive this honor. He enjoyed the chance to spend some time with his teachers in an atmosphere outside the classroom.

Reaching Maturity

Junior Class Officers: Secretary Lucy Montalvo, Advisor Mr. A. Sullivan, President Linda Driscoll, Vice-president Katie Franklin.

The class of '97 knew the importance of their junior year and worked hard to make it a memorable one by bringing new traditions to the high school.

The class served as the hosts for the '96 Academic Olympics. Junior class advisor, Mr. A. Sullivan, along with class president Linda Driscoll, spent countless hours planning and coordinating ideas and events in the hopes of making the class more productive, more spirited and more motivated.

"Through the student government we have the chance to make a difference in the school," said secretary Lucy Montalvo, who helped put together the first ever Junior Ring Day ceremony held on February 15. The ceremony was a class gathering where juniors ate breakfast together, showed off their rings, and spent quality time together, sharing friendship and old memories.

Making a Difference

"Our love should not be just in words and talk, it must be true love which shows itself in action." (1 John 3:18) This is the Habitat for Humanity's creed, and for two weeks it also became the motto for twenty-seven teenagers, the winners of the Pritzker-Cousins Awards. The high school students came together in the little town of Franklin, West Virginia to build a home for the Habitat for Humanity foundation.

As part of a generous donation from the first cousins of the Pritzer family, a wealthy Chicago based family, Habitat for Humanity gave twenty-seven high school students from nine different states across the country, the opportunity to fly to West Virginia to build a home for a needy family.

The students selected from hundreds of applicants based on accademic records and teachers' recommendations, gave up two weeks of their summer vacation, to work in the sweltering heat, but to them it was time well spent. In exchange for their labors they formed many memories from their experiences as they rushed to meet the two week deadline, necessary to finish the three bedroom home.

The home was bought by the Severence family with its five kids who up to then had been living in one bedroom of their parents' home.

At the end of the two weeks it was clear that Habitat had exercised its slogan, "Different People Making a Difference." Habitat for Humanity made a big difference in the life of this family, as well as in the life of this author.

In Cold Blood

Have you ever sat in English class, reading a great book, and wondered what it would be like to take part in the story, to be one of the characters, and to walk in their shoes?

The students of the Law and Literature class were able to do just that. While reading In Cold Blood by Truman Capote in English class, they analyzed the legal aspects of the plot in Law class. Taking apart evidence, piece by piece, they investigated the murder of the Clutter family.

Once the book was completed, the students then were able to take on the personalities of the characters and act out the trial of the murder. The students had to know what their characters had or had not heard, known or had not known about the murder. Those, who were not actual characters, took on the roles of the attorneys and wrote affidavits and opening and closing statements.

"The course connected the students' English and Law skills," said Mr. R. Richardson, who taught the legal aspect of the course.

So, to find out who killed the Clutter family, you'll have to take the Law, Literature, and Forensics course next year.

Juniors' Night Out

What better way to celebrate class unity than to bring the juniors together to welcome the upcoming holidays? On a cold winter night, Friday, December 15, the junior class braved the frigid temperatures and came to the Junior Dinner Dance. Before the dance began, the junior student council members had been busy transforming the north cafeteria into a winter wonderland, using colored balloons and streamers.

Once the D.J. started to play his music, the group of elegantly dressed students appeared on the dance floor. Guys, normally seen with jeans and t-shirts, wore suits and ties while the girls looked stunning in their cocktail dresses. There was plenty of room on the dance floor that night because only about thirty percent of the class attended. Some attributed the low attendance to inadequate advertising while others felt that the date had been changed without sufficient advance notice.

In any case, many of the juniors commented that it was hard to believe that next year they'd be together at the Prom.

-Michelle Mullen

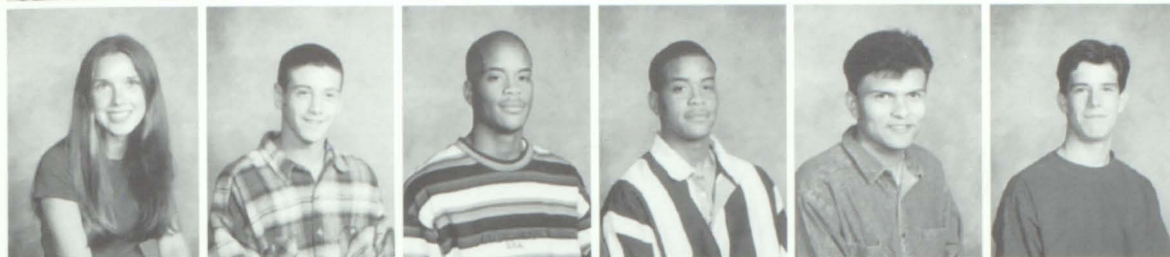

Ebony Grant and friends left the dance with an armful of helium balloons. The DJ was great and kept the crowd on its feet throughout the evening.

Giving Back to Bay Shore

(below)Mr. and Mrs. M. Barbash were guests of honor at the afternoon reception in the cafeteria.

Six hundred students were going to be taken on school buses to the City for FREE? For weeks the eleventh and twelfth grade students buzzed with excitement in anticipation of seeing the play "Having Our Say." Finally, on November 16th, the anxious students piled onto all eighteen buses to travel to the Booth Theater on Broadway.

Greeted by TV cameras and reporters, the students and teachers were swamped with questions from every direction. Upon entering the theater, everyone was filled with awe at the attractive little set and the comfortable atmosphere of the turn-of-the century decor in the theatre.

The entire outing was made possible through the generosity of the Barbash family, who simply wanted to give back to Bay Shore what their children had received: "a wonderful learning experience." The play recounted the lives and experiences of Sarah and Elizabeth Delaney as they grew up in the changing American society of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Life was often difficult and harsh as they endured prejudice, poverty, and personal hardships.

The Barbash family provided many students with their first exposure to live professional theater. They lived up to one of the themes of the play which was to "put your money where your heart is." They took their roles as citizens seriously and impressed the entire community with their dedication and commitment.

The students acquired a special feeling of appreciation for the Barbash family and a better understanding of what it was like being a minority in America.

Best of Luck to the Graduating Seniors from the Class of '97 AIM HIGH!

At Awareness Weekend Natalie Martins and Allison Kroger shared hugs and a stick of licorice.
(inset right) Karen Phelan, Emily Germano, and Stacey Damaso enjoyed one of the last days of summer before the start of a new school year.

Maturity and determination were only a few of the many qualities that this year's graduating class possessed. The members of the Class of '96 began their journey to adulthood four years ago as they entered the high school as Freshmen, the lowest on the totem pole. Friendships and field trips guided the students on their journey through their high school years.

The Senior class demonstrated pride and school spirit through their involvement in school activities. They held a memorable fashion show, and danced the night away at the Senior Banquet. The class showed its unity and closeness and their ability to work together to accomplish many goals. As the years passed, new responsibilities and privileges greeted the Class of '96. Decisions for the future were made, and plans for the prom were excitedly discussed among friends. And as graduation drew closer, each member of the class experienced mixed feelings of anticipation and anxiety. Although they were each grateful to be leaving with the valuable gift of a great education, they were also saddened at the prospect of their time at Bay Shore drawing to an end.

As the sun set on their high school careers, they were all unsure of their futures, but one thing remained certain—the memories and experiences of Bay Shore would help carry them through the years to come.

SENIORS

Keri Berka

"I will always cherish my memories of keeping the beat for our band as we marched down Fifth Avenue in New York City's annual Columbus Day Parade."

Keith Herrador

"During my years at BSHS, the one memory I will never forget was the time on stage when 900 people simultaneously laughed at me, wearing a T-shirt and heart boxer shorts."

Kara Becker

Through the good times and the bad, the laughter and tears, I've grown as a student, as an individual, and as a person. It all becomes a memory tucked deep into the crevices of my soul and cherished."

Top 10 Seniors

Class of '96

Andrea Montalvo

"I will always remember the place where my dreams were born. My experiences in band, art, and clubs have helped me in building character, confidence, and life-long friends."

Maryellen Seplavy

"I have had the opportunity to become involved with Environmental Club, S.A.D.D., Interact, National Honor Society, Band, and Drama. I take with me the ability to open many new doors ahead of me."

Brian Ehlers

"I will cherish my participation on the varsity soccer and basketball teams. These were experiences that I enjoyed and will remember forever."

James George

"I will always remember the faces of encouragement and faces of doubt. When I look at my own face, I see a person whose experiences at Bay Shore have prepared him well for the future."

Tasneem Hoque

"Whether running a race, playing in the orchestra, or listening to a teacher, I was always busy. Before time disappears, we must make full use of it while we have a chance."

Melissa E. Keckler

"BSHS has enabled me to define who I am and also to realize that these years will provide the concrete foundation for building a successful future."

Judith DiMatteo

"Without high school, I could never have been in the top ten and could not have taken this picture."

Life on the Runway

A Night with the Senior Class

As soon as the lights began to dim, everyone knew that this year's Senior Class Fashion Show would be a night to remember.

This annual fashion event, which has long been a Bay Shore tradition, was an event that outdid all other previous shows. Senior Class advisor, Miss D. Doyle and members of the senior class, along with assistance from Mr. J. D'Antoni, worked to make this show unique and special. Diversity was the main theme for this year's program with fashions ranging from lingerie to formalwear and even a tribute to the Beatles.

The audience applauded and cheered as the student models strutted down the runway in their leather outfits and beachwear. The bridal party at the end was spectacular as everyone looked their best in their gowns and tuxedos. "I could not believe my eyes; everyone looked so wonderful," said senior Scott Widor as he left the auditorium.

From the music to the drawings at the end, the evening went off without a hitch. The collaboration and hard work of those involved was evident to all in attendance.

-Anthony C. Patterson

Tara Driscoll introduced for the Fashion Show as the president of the senior class.

R. Marcus Harris showed off his hip-hop leather gear.

The audience enjoyed the tribute to the Beatles and the dances and fashions of the Seventies.

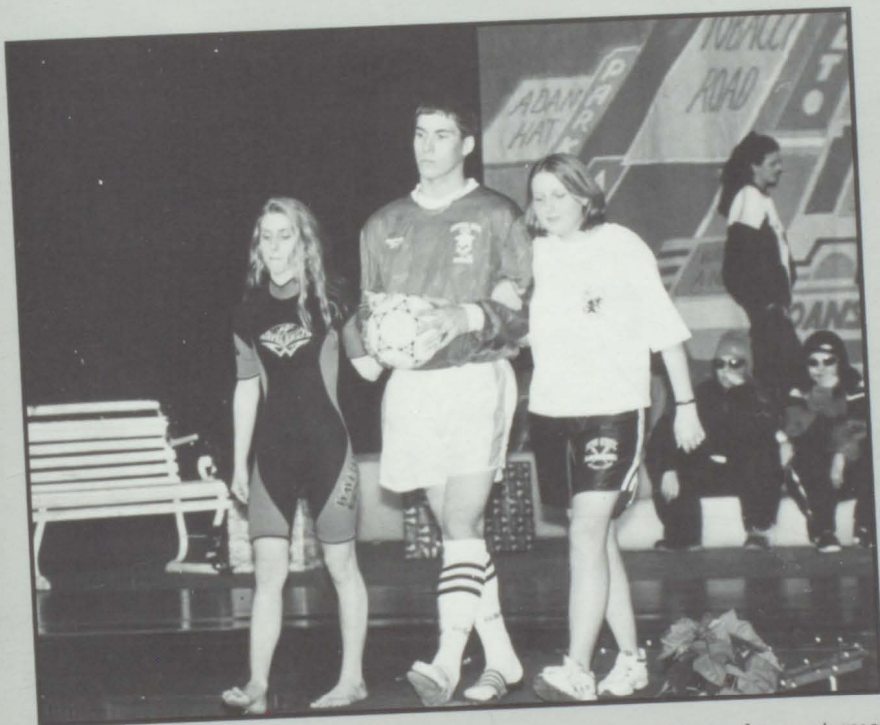

Katrina Hill modeled her leather apparel and looked at ease on the runway.

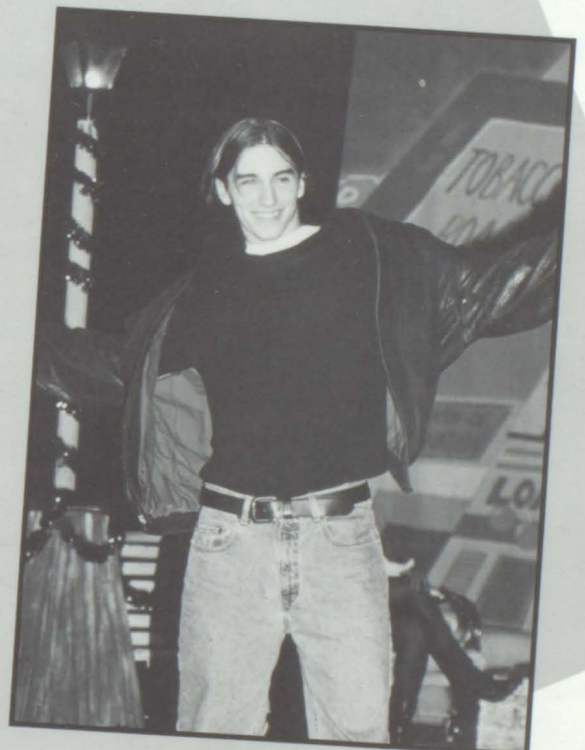

Kim Jones displayed an attitude along with her fashions.

Kelly Striplin brought a smile to the audience in her satin lingerie scene.

Escorted by Kelly Pascale and Allison Kroger, Todd Troise began the sportswear scene.

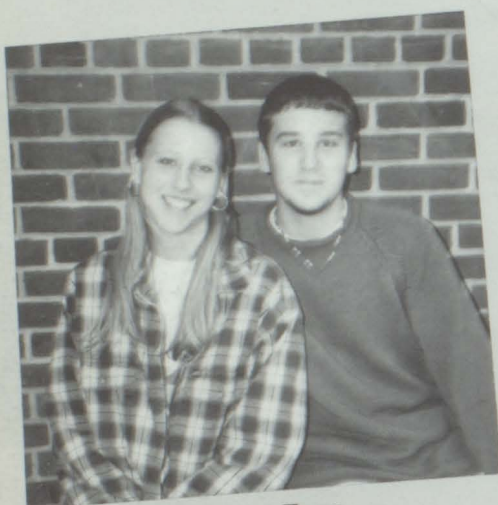

Adam Tucker was proud to be part of the show.

The Class of '96

Thirteen years ago, we embarked on a journey- one which would require strength, perseverance, motivation, and the burning desire to achieve. Although we were too young to realize it then, each one of us was joined together by a common thread which would guide us along our way. As we journeyed, we encountered many storms-maintaining grades, managing time, organizing our lives-and battled many monsters-fear, insecurity, yet somehow, managed to overcome the obstacles and continue to trek onward. Now, as we leave the familiar halls of Bay Shore High, it would seem appropriate to say our journey is complete. However, the real journey has just begun. We must take the lessons we've learned from our experiences and apply them to our future. We must light our own torches and illuminate the dark paths which await us.- Tasneem Hoque

The laughter, tears and excitement of the past four years are etched in our minds and those who have loved and supported us through it all will remain attached to our hearts.

MY SON
In this world of a thousand wonders there is nothing more wonderful than having a son like you to count on,
to be proud of,
to love.

George, you'll always mean so much — not just for the special things we share
but because of the wonderful person you are.
Love always, Mom

ROMAIN, CONGRATULATIONS!

May you always be a dreamer.
May your wildest dreams come true.
As you are about to start a new chapter in your

Nicole,

You're such an important part of our lives and we just want to tell you you'll always be the "wind beneath our wings."

If you only knew how wonderful it is to have a daughter like you. It's always meant so much to us to see your smile, listen to your ideas and watch you grow and learn. You have become your own person. We hope you realize how many special memories you've made for us . . . how many times we've been so proud to say, That's our daughter . . .

As we reach the end of another year and another volume of the Marauder, we bid fond farewell to the students who will be leaving to take their places in other destinations in the world. Some leave because their families are moving, and others because they have graduated and are going on to careers and colleges sometimes hundreds of miles from here. It remains the task for next year's staff to preserve the memories of the future classes at Bay Shore High School. We leave this book as a testimony of what it was like in 1995 and 1996, growing up in a remote suburban community along Sunrise Highway. We've enjoyed reflecting on our days here, and every time we open the pages of this yearbook, we'll be able to step back into the world we once knew as high school students so long ago.

COLOPHON

This seventy-third volume of the Bay Shore MARAUDER was printed by Taylor Publishing Company of Texas under the supervision of Mr. Neil Sanders, the Taylor representative. Photographers Doug Brehm and Jerome Amos from Riviera Studios took all of the official photographs and portraits. The cover was made from maroon lexotone vellum, silkscreened with gold letters and an embossed gold design, created by senior Jennifer Thomas. The tan parchment endsheets were embossed with the year of the publication. 475 copies of the 216-page book, which included two full-color signatures and one color tip-in on #80 matte stock were printed. A student supplement will be added to complete the book and will include the closing activities of the '95-96 school year. The standard typeface that was used throughout the book was Ballardvale, and all text was submitted on diskette by utilizing Taylor's Typevision and Directoryvision software programs. This was a publication of the Yearbook Design and Layout and the Creative Writing for Publication classes, under the instruction of Mrs. Carol A. Jones and Mr. Joseph B. D'Antoni.

COLOPHON

This seventy-third volume of the New York Times MAGAZINE was edited by Taylor Publishing Company of New York under the supervision of Mr. John H. Taylor, the Taylor Press, Inc., 1230 Broadway, New York, N.Y. The text was set in the Times type, and all of the original photographs and portraits. The book was made from the best quality materials, all selected with great care and no compromise. The design was by the Taylor Press. The two parchment endpapers were designed with the same style as the book. 400 copies of the 775-page book, which included ten full-page portraits and was bound in an 800-page volume, were printed. A special presentation will be made to complete the book and to complete the series of the 775-page book. The standard typeface that was used throughout the book was Garamond. The book was published by the Taylor Press and Taylor's Typographic and Lithographic Company, Inc., and all text was set in the Times type. # AS THE SUN SETS. . .

MARAUDER SIGNING PARTY

(below) Melinda Anastasi concentrated as she carefully inscribed a closing message to her friend.

Cate Rettaliata and Meghan Hand were impressed with the layouts and colors in the award-winning yearbook.

SENIOR CLASS DAY

(above) Never one to miss a meal, Anton Fiala made sure that he had plenty to eat.

(right) It was a bitter-sweet moment for Bob Hulse as he escorted Christine Doxey and Natalie Martins onto the stage.

GRADUATION

Friday, June 21, 1996

(above) President, Tara Driscoll and Vice-President, Michelle Kramer, received last minute instructions from Miss D. Doyle.
