Long Island and the Legacy of Eugenics: Station of Intolerance
by Mark A. Torres

Join author Mark A. Torres to discuss his latest work. In the early twentieth century, eugenics was at the forefront of scientific discourse in the quest to understand human genetics. On Long Island and throughout the nation, eugenacists were granted unfettered access to conduct experiments on prisoners, psychiatric patients, Coney Island circus performers, Native American reservations and more, all in an effort to legitimize a false science. The origins of the eugenics movement can be found within the Eugenics Record Office, an otherwise nondescript two-and-a-half-story administrative building in Cold Spring Harbor, New York. The work conducted there directly led to the forced sterilization of thousands of American citizens and the passage of anti-immigration laws, and it sparked a deadly global movement that directly inspired the murderous Nazi regime to commit heinous acts under the banner of eugenics. Author Mark Torres explores the local characters, influences, landmarks and ghastly consequences that emanated from this small Long Island facility for decades and spread throughout the world.

Please note that there will be no Hometown Histories in January. The program will resume in February.
